SEARCHING BOSTON FOR LORD HOPE

WANTED FOR FORGERY

Five Detectives from Police Headquarters Seek English Financier for Utah Officials---Millions Involved in His Business Operations.

"Lord" Beresford Hope, man of finance, representative of vast English capitalists' schemes, is sought to-day by five detectives from Police Headquarters.

Hope has disappeared from his lodgings at the quiet Otis on Mt. Vernon street, where he gave up his quarters last Saturday. At the same time his lawyer, who accompanied him here from the West, former Attorney-General Bagley of Idaho, paid his bill at the United States Hotel and departed for parts unknown.

In the possession of the police is a request from the Sheriff at Salt Lake City to arrest Hope and hold him on the charge of forgery and uttering of a false certificate of stock. A Salt Lake City dispatch announces that the warrant was issued by Judge Whitaker.

Every railroad station in the city is being watched for traces of Hope. Inspector Morrissey is stationed at the steamship Republic, which sails at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, to make sure that his man does not try to sail on that boat.

The Newport police have been notified. When Hope left the Hotel Otis last Saturday, he said that he would be in Newport until the 14th, when he intended to sail for England.

It is said that Attorney Bagley is in New York and leaves for Chicago to-day in an endeavor to locate some facts about Hope.

Attended Advent Church.

On his cards the financier had this engraved. "Sir Beresford Hope, M. P." He made effort to get acquainted with the best people and on Sunday attended the Church of the Advent in the West End where he met a number of prominent people. Some of these people dined him at the University Club, where he carefully neglected talking business.

The specific charge against Hope is that the signature of "John Hill," as president of the Great Western Coal & Iron Company upon a certificate of stock is a forgery. The warrant was issued by Judge J. J. Whitaker of the City Court and sworn out by Deputy Sheriff Joseph C. Sharp.

Hope, it is said, has many victims in Utah, and it is declared that he obtained $900 in small deals from various concerns.

When Hope arrived in Boston reports came from Salt Lake City that the Mormons were doubtful of the dealings he had had with them. Lawyer Bagley and Hope in an interview announced that everything was all right: that only the "Lord's" enemies were saying anything against him. At that time "Lord" Hope denied that he had an English title. Salt Lake City dispatches said that he had.

Hope denied that there was any forgery connected with his affairs: that he had left any unpaid bills, and said that he had credentials in his pocket which would prove that he had the best of backing and much money.

POLICE LOSE ALL TRACE.

He said he represented English capitalists who had plans for development of Utah properties on a large scale. To show that his intentions were good he said that he and Mr. Bagley had secured an office at No. 60 State street, where they would remain so long as necessary for their financial interests in Boston.

The police were unable to find any trace of the Hope office anywhere on State street to-day.

It was said that last night Hope had gone to Newport. Those who have been following the affairs of Beresford Hope in this city and the West for the past few days were aware that efforts were being made to secure a warrant for his arrest.

WILLIAMS SCORES BIG POINT FOR UNION LABOR

STRIKER FREED BECAUSE THE INJUNCTION PAPERS WERE NOT SERVED ON HIM.

On the ground that an injunction issued against a labor union must be served individually on every member, else it is not constitutional, George Fred Williams secured the discharge of a striking member of the Tapestry Weavers' Union in Judge Fessenden's court to-day, pending a settlement of his contention, one of the most important raised in years.

Before Judge Schofield issued the injunction asked for by the Cochrane Manufacturing Company of East Dedham, restraining officers and members of Tapestry Weavers' Union No. 529 from interfering, intimidating or picketing, the point was raised by Mr. Williams that the blanket injunction was unconstitutional.

"In order to have anybody in for contempt, the contempt must be made individual," said Mr. Williams. "A copy of the injunction must be served on each member personally. Otherwise he may not know that the injunction has been issued by the court."

Charged with Contempt.

It was agreed that the point raised by Mr. Williams should be decided by the Supreme Court. Pending this decision Mr. Williams secured an agreement that no member of the union should be brought into court unless he had been personally served with a copy of the injunction.

To-day William Smith, one of the members of the Tapestry Weavers' Union, was brought into court charged with contempt in violating provisions of the injunction. Subpoenas had also been issued for James Burns, recording secretary, Fred Shevory, treasurer, and Joseph Marley, a member. The cases of the latter three were not reached. Smith was the only one in the courtroom which held a large sized delegation of labor men.

Mr. Williams recited to Judge Fessenden the agreement that had been made in Judge Schofield's court.

"The defendant has not been served with a copy of the injunction," said Mr. Williams.

Labor Men Enthusiastic.

Attorneys for the Cochrane Manufacturing Company were unable to show that Smith had been served with the papers agreed upon.

"Discharged," said Judge Fessenden.

The host of labor men in court were enthusiastic at the dismissal of the charge against Smith and surrounded him and Mr. Williams in the corridor.

The point made by Mr. Williams was not raised at the trial of Taguey and Ohlson, the Lynn machinists who served ten days each in jail for contempt under similar circumstances. The injunction which they were charged with violating was secured against the strikers as officers and members of the Machinists' Union and not as individuals. Neither was each served with a copy of the injunction.

It is expected that counsel of the Cochrane Manufacturing Company will make an endeavor to serve copies of the injunction on the men late to-day and then bring them into court on the contempt charge.

Most Important Point.

The point raised by Mr. Williams is regarded as one of the most important that has ever been brought before the court so far as labor men are concerned. It has never before been brought up that copies of the injunction must be served on every member of a union and that the injunction cannot be issued unless it contains the names of every member of the union.

It is probable that the question will be vigorously argued before the Supreme Court, as its importance is recognized by the big employers who have hitherto been able to secure injunctions in blanket form.

The striking tapestry workers of the Cochrane Company are fighting for an increase in pay. They went on strike June 1, and the Cochrane Company hired non-union help.

In their application for an injunction the company's attorney said that the new employes were being constantly interfered with, that the company's business was being seriously injured and that $20,000 worth of goods had been destroyed through being held up in process.

The union contains both men and women. Two of the officers named in the injunction are women, Mary Woodrow, vice-president, and Alice Martin, financial secretary.

The company expressly desired to prohibit picketing in any form about its works.

8 PERSONS KILLED IN ENGLISH AUTO WRECK

LONDON, July 12.—Eight persons were killed, at least two fatally injured and sixteen others seriously hurt by the overturning of a motor omnibus, which ran away on Handcross Hill, near Crawley, to-day.

The omnibus was bound from London to Brighton and carried thirty-four passengers. Going down the hill, which is one of the most dangerous in England, the brakes failed to work. The chauffeur lost control of the big machine which ran down the hill at a terrific speed.

Near the bottom it struck some obstruction and overturned, hurling the passengers in every direction. Some were crushed under the vehicle.

Six were dead when picked up. Two others died within a few minutes. The rest were taken to hospitals, where it was said two have no chance to recover. Hardly one of the thirty-four passengers escaped without some injury.

PRISONER CUTS MATE UP WITH RAZOR; IS HELD

Jail Officials Tried to Conceal News of Attack in House of Correction.

Accused of attempting to kill a fellow-prisoner at Deer Island on the Fourth of July, Louis Spack, alias Sparks, was arraigned in the Municipal Court to-day, pleaded not guilty and was held in $500 bonds for the Grand Jury.

Although the assault took place over a week ago, the police were not notified of it until yesterday. The jail officials made every effort to prevent details of the assault becoming public, and there was even an attempt made to-day to have the arraignment of the prisoner disposed of before the routine cases were taken up.

Prisoners Become Foes.

Spack is a young man who was sent to the House of Correction last February to serve eighteen months, and his alleged victim, Joseph Kaufman, was sentenced the same time to serve two years. They conceived a violent dislike for one another. On the Fourth of July the prisoners were allowed exercise, walking in line. Spack and Kaufman were heard cursing each other, speaking low so that an officer would not pounce upon them.

Suddenly Spack, according to the police, jumped from the line, so as to give his arm a free swing, drew an open razor from his pocket, sunk the blade into Kaufman's chest as far as it would go, and then drew it forward and downward, making a wound fifteen inches long. The wound penetrated to the breast bone.

40 Stitches in Wound.

Kaufman clutched at his breast and sank to the ground. Spack tried to jump on his body, but a prison officer grabbed him. Kaufman was taken to the prison hospital, where it was feared he would bleed to death. Dr. Albert A. Taft made forty stitches in the wound and probably saved the man's life.

Superintendent Gerrish notified the penal institutions commissioner and the police were finally called into the matter.

FLAG AT HALF MAST FOR FOUR FISHERMEN

The loss of four East Boston fishermen in dories off Georges Banks was reported to-day by Captain Herbert Nickerson, when his schooner, the Buema reached T Wharf with its flag flying at half mast.

No word has come from the men since they left the schooner Tuesday morning at 6 o'clock. Andrew and Harold Nickerson, brothers of the Captain, were in one dory, while in the second was Jerry Clement and William Pierce. All come from East Boston.

Caught by Fog.

Captain Nickerson reports that the men left the vessel with the other dories on Tuesday morning at 6 o'clock. At 11 a. m. the two others came back to the schooner. A fog closed in, and not until the afternoon was the schooner enabled to cruise about to look for the missing men.

Late in the afternoon they sighted the schooner Benjamin Phillips and gave chase, thinking the men might have been picked up by her. Darkness set in, however, and they were forced to anchor. The next day they cruised about again and got no trace of the men. The men were lost about seventy-five miles southeast of Highland light.

Has Food and Water.

On July 11 last Andrew Nickerson, one of the lost men, was out in a dory for fifty-one hours without food or water. He was rescued by the schooner Robert and Arthur, and upon his arrival in Boston from that trip declared that he would never go out in a dory again without food and water.

Captain Nickerson said to-day that his brother has kept true to his vow, and when he set away on Tuesday he had food and water in the dory and also a compass. For this reason he thinks there is a good chance for at least two of the men to arrive in port in safety.

MYSTERY IN NIGHT ATTEMPT TO KILL GIRL

The Boston police are to-day hunting for a South Boston man who is supposed to be concerned in the mysterious shooting last night of Miss Margaret Burns of Watertown, which took place in that town.

Miss Burns was only slightly injured, receiving a scalp wound from one of the three revolver shots fired at her in the dark. Had it hit her one-half inch lower it would have gone through her brain. At the time of the shooting she was accompanied by L. Xavier, a motorman employed on the Boston Elevated system.

The couple were returning from a social affair and had reached the corner of Belmont and Prentiss streets, near the Belmont town line.

That part of the street was dark and the hour was late, 12:20, and there were no pedestrians beside themselves on the street. As they stopped and talked they noticed a man coming along Belmont street from the same direction they had come. The man stopped for some time in the shadow of a large tree.

Just as Miss Burns and her companion were about to part, her home being on the next street, No. 9 Keith, the man jumped out from the shadow of the tree. Before either knew what was going on three revolver shots rang out.

Miss Burns dropped to the ground, wounded in the head, and Xavier ran after the man. The chase led across a large field, and the assailant escaped in the darkness.

Xavier returned and carried Miss Burns to her home.

Captain Cooney of the Watertown police said to-day that he believed the shooting was done by a rejected sweetheart who had seen Miss Burns and Xavier at the party and had followed them.

According to Captain Cooney, Miss Burns told a patrolman after the shooting that she believed she knew the man who is now wanted. She gave his name and an address on a street in South Boston. For the man who is said to live at this address the police are now hunting.

Friends of the Thaws Refuse to Testify;

WOMEN DEFY STATE

Miss May MacKenzie Absolutely Declines to Tell Garvan What She Knows.

Mrs. Beatrice Schwarz, Subpoenaed by Trick, Says She Will Tell What She Knows.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 12.—The District-Attorney's office is putting all its efforts toward forcing the friends of Harry Thaw to give testimony that can be used against him at his trial. Three witnesses, all intimately associated with Thaw or his young wife, were sought out by the prosecution yesterday and requested to tell what they know about the case.

The first of these, Mrs. Mayme R. Schwartz, was served with a subpoena by a detective in her apartments at the Pierpont, after making every effort to avoid being dragged into the case. She later expressed her willingness to tell to-day what she knows of the case.

William Sturgis, the second witness and a friend of Thaw's, is in Berlin, Ct., beyond the reach of Mr. Garvan. His attitude is such that it is unlikely any effort will be made to bring him into the trial, although he was at first much wanted.

Garvan Threatens Miss McKenzie.

Miss May McKenzie, Mrs. Thaw's closest associate, is the third person Mr. Garvan desires to question. She was examined last night, but absolutely refused to give any testimony of the kind expected of her. This so irritated Mr. Garvan that he has threatened to bring her before the grand jury unless she proves more willing to assist him in prosecuting the husband of her dearest friend.

Young Thaw became communicative

HEALTH BOARD HITS HUNSENHISER'S PLACE

The name of one of the packing houses condemned in the investigation just made by the State Board of Health, was made public to-day. It is the establishment of Henry Hunsenhiser, of No. 104 North street, Somerville.

Members of the Board of Health made a visit to this place in the absence of the proprietor and found conditions that called for severe censure. The men were found working about the place when the visitors arrived. The conditions surrounding them, a member of the Health Board said, "demand an immediate change."

In many of the towns visited in various parts of the State where bad conditions were found the local Boards of Health have been instructed to take immediate action to have improvements made. The names of these slaughter houses were not made public in the report of the Board of Health, in order to allow the local Boards of Health to take action.

In reference to the Somerville place and those that were found in smaller places the report says:

"Within 10 Miles of City."

"One of the worst of the smaller establishments examined is situated in a city within ten miles of the State House. Here offal was allowed to accumulate in the cellar and decompose. The odor is exceedingly offensive at a distance of 100 feet, and the drainage runs over the surface of the ground.

"In most of the small establishments in the country the chief business is the slaughtering of calves, many of which are immature and make 'bob veal.' A few cows and steers may be slaughtered from week to week, and now and again a few swine and sheep. The investigation went far enough to show that local authorities may well give careful attention to the slaughter houses within their several jurisdictions."

INSTRUCTORS' MEETING ENDS

NEW HAVEN, July 12.—Mrs. Fannie Fern Andrews of Boston and Magnus W. Alexander of Lynn, Mass., spoke to-day at the final session of the American Institute of Instruction. Mrs. Andrews dealt with her experiences with parents' associations, and Mr. Alexander described the system of industrial training for the young at the General Electric Company in Lynn.

"I'D LIKE TO HELP HARRY"---STURGIS

NEW BRITAIN, Ct., July 11.—William Sturgis, who is known as Thaw's best friend and who is said to have introduced Thaw to Evelyn Nesbitt, was seen to-day in the factory of the Seward Rubber Company at Berlin.

He is a tall young man, of dark complexion and smooth face. He came from the factory into the office of the company wearing blue trousers, a soft shirt, open at the throat, his sleeves rolled up and looking like a hustling young worker in a busy mercantile enterprise. A print of an English bulldog on the wall suggested that Mr. Sturgis was a lover of dogs.

"I take it," was said to him, "that you know Harry Thaw?"

"Yes, I do," replied Mr. Sturgis.

"What kind of a fellow is he?"

"He is a good fellow," replied Mr. Sturgis. "But you mustn't ask me anything about that case, because I cannot talk of it, as my counsel has advised me not to do so. I know the Thaw family, but the story that I was with him the night of the murder and that I am now going away to Europe is all rot.

"Why should I go away? There is no reason why I should do so. I am attending to my business here and have been doing so since last January, and though I go to New York occasionally I am not going there again for a few days as I am too busy, but I have sent a letter to Assistant District Attorney Garvan and a similar letter to Thaw's lawyers, telling them where I am. So far as I am concerned this whole thing is grossly exaggerated, and I wrote to New York so that the lawyers in the case may know where I am, as I do not want to be tied up there from my business."

Mr. Sturgis said he knew Stanford White, but he declined to make any statement concerning him other than that he was a man of high standing, who was fond of sociability.

When an answer was urged to the question whether he had ever heard Thaw make the threat that he would kill White, as has been said by some of the show girls who have given their testimony to Mr. Garvin, Mr. Sturgis said:

"Now, you must not question about those things, for I will not answer. My lawyers have told me not to, though I would like to help Harry out of his present trouble."

ONE THAW WITNESS YIELDS; TO TESTIFY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Mrs. Mayme R. Schwarz, the defiant witness in the Thaw-White tragedy, who refused to obey a John Doe subpoena, yesterday notified the District Attorney's office from her apartments in the Pierpont, that she would appear to-day.

When Detective Berry and several others went to the Pierpont Manager Beviss denied that Mrs. Schwarz was in the house and said that she had left the city for an indefinite period.

Some hours later Mrs. Schwarz asked for ice water. When she opened the door for an attendant Berry was behind him and slipped the subpoena into the hand that was extended for the water.

Last night, in her apartments, in the Pierpont, she gave her first interview since she has been sought in connection with the Thaw-White tragedy to a reporter of THE AMERICAN.

"It is absolutely false," she said, "that I was at the District Attorney's office today, as reported, or on any other day.

"I was not present at any dinner at the St. Regis where Harry Thaw, seeing Stanford White at another table, drew a revolver and threatened to shoot White."

William Sturgis, for whom process servers from the District Attorney's office have been hunting since the tragedy, and who, it is said, frequently persuaded Thaw not to put into effect his alleged threat to take the life of Thaw, has written to Assistant District Attorney Garvan from Berlin, Ct., where he is secretary of the Seward Rubber Companny.

ACTRESS IN BOSTON TALKS OF TRAGEDY

Miss Edna McClure, whose name has been mentioned so frequently in connection with the Thaw-White roof garden tragedy in New York, and who told what she knew about the principals to Assistant District Attorney Garvan, is playing a small part in "The Tourists" at the Majestic Theatre.

With reference to her talk with Mr. Garvan, Miss McClure said to a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN:

"I told him that personally I knew naught of the feelings of the one toward the other; that I had heard no threats; that there was no reason for a remote possibility of my having been made a confidant of either, and that I knew both gentlemen but in the superficial way that dozens of my companions of the theatre did; that neither had ever said or done anything to destroy my feelings of cordial respect and good comradeship, and that my only knowledge of the alleged flourishing of a revolver by Mr. Thaw, accompanied by threats, was obtained from the newspapers.

"I could have been nothing but a disappointment, if any idea prevailed that I could have shed any direct light upon the events leading up to Mr. White's death.

"Mr. Garvan concluded with many interrogations as to the reports which had ever come to my ears regarding the three principals and their relations. I responded volubly, for Mr. White and Mr. and Mrs. Thaw were frequent topics of chattering feminine discussion among all who knew them.

"All manner of stories have been circulated about them, and I feel sure that any and all I have heard and unfolded to Mr. Garvan had been given him many times since he began his investigation. Of their truth or falsity I have no personal knowledge."

WHITE'S WILL SHOWS HE WAS NOT SO RICH AS WAS SUPPOSED

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Jul 12.—The belief that the late Stanford White was not as rich as many supposed him to be was strengthened yesterday when his will was filed for probate.

Save for an interest in mining properties, thought to be rather small, Mr. White left no real estate. His town and country homes have always been the property of his wife. Mrs. White is named as executrix, and receives nearly all her husband's personal estate, the value of which is unknown, according to the petition for probate. The testator says he has given to his surviving partners, Charles F. McKim and William R. Mead, his interest in property held by them in common with him. Mr. White directs Mr. McKim and Mr. Mead to pay to his executrix whatever may be due him from his business.

The interest in the mining properties, which are in Hermosa, New Mexico, is bequeathed to Mr. White's brother, who also receives the sum of $1,000. To his mother, Alexina B. White, the testator leaves $2,000 and the interest in the copyrights of his father, Richard Grant White. The entire residuary estate, which is not listed, is left to the widow. It is not thought to be very large. Mr. White was insured for $199,000, and $149,000 of this sum was paid to Mrs. White on last Friday. It is believed the remaining $50,000 will go to the architect's son, Lawrence.

DECLARES FRIEND URGED THAW TO HIRE AN ASSASSIN

NEW YORK, July 12.—That Harry K. Thaw, after having bitterly threatened to kill Stanford White, was earnestly counselled because of his own wealth and position to have the act committed by a paid assassin, is declared to have come to the knowledge of the District Attorney's office to-day.

An immediate attempt was made to bring within jurisdiction of the prosecution the person who, it was asserted, had urged this upon Thaw. Even the exact words of the advice said to have been given to Thaw were learned by Assistant District Attorney Garvan.

When Thaw is alleged to have made the threat against the life of White the friend with him, who is now being sought for, is quoted as saying angrily to the young Pittsburger:

"For God's sake, Harry, don't be a fool. You're too wealthy to do anything like that. Why don't you have somebody do the job for you. Don't do it yourself. That's a better game for a man of your wealth and position."

FORGERY, SAYS MRS. HARTJE ON WITNESS STAND

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 12.—The famous Hartje divorce trial was resumed before Judge Fraser to-day. Mrs. Mary Scott Hartje, the respondent, was the first witness called. She stated that the letter in evidence, which she had formerly identified as one she had written to Susie Wagner, a servant, was not in her handwriting, and that in so far as the handwriting was concerned the letter was a forgery.

This writing was to have been taken as a standard, but she declared that it was only an imitation of her writing. It was admitted by Mrs. Hartje that the contents of the letter shown here are practically the same as she had written to Susie Wagner, but she denied that the sentence about wanting Susie on her side was in the letter she wrote.

It is thought that probably a dozen of Pittsburg's best known bank employes will be called to testify that the letters alleged to have been written by Mrs. Hartje to Tom Mandine, coachman, are forgeries.

The necessity of bringing the bank employes into the case will be to show that in the years of the couple's married life Mrs. Hartje had occasion to cash checks, likewise sign them. Her signature is well known at a number of the leading banks, and those connected with the banks will be asked if there is any similarity between the writing on the checks and the letters alleged to have been written by Mrs. Hartje.

It was reported yesterday that the employes of the banks who examined the letters did not hesitate in declaring that the writing on Mrs. Hartje's checks was not the same as that in the letters, and that in their opinion the missives were not genuine.

ROCKEFELLER IS READY TO FACE INDICTMENT

By William Hoster.

Special Cable to Boston American.

COMPIEGNE, July 12.—John D. Rockefeller absolutely refused to comment on the Findlay, Ohio, indictment, and it is believed here that he was prepared for the news. Contrary to custom he did not come into town yesterday morning, and was inaccessible until 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when he drove to the golf links. He is not as well as usual, being worried about the health of Mrs. Strong and Mrs. Prentice, who must remain at Carlsbad a few weeks longer for treatment.

If extradition has been asked for, it is not known here, but it is not necessary, as Mr. Rockefeller repeated yesterday that he will sail for America on the 20th of July and has his tickets bought. His friends make light of the indictment. Professor Strong said:

"Of course, Mr. Rockefeller will not talk about this absurd matter."

Those close to him say the indictment cannot stand and point to his recent statement that he has not been connected with the Standard Oil Company for twelve years. His friends draw this fine distinction, that he is president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, which is only a holding company, and that his rank is purely honorary.

It is admitted, however, that he is still the presiding genius and that all problems of weight finally are submitted to him.

FOUR PRETTY CHORUS GIRLS WHO HAVE GIVEN EVIDENCE IN THE THAW-WHITE TRAGEDY

again yesterday afternoon and gave out a statement without the permission of his counsel, who has extracted a promise from him to say no more. Thaw positively reasserted his sanity and expressed deep regret at the public attention which has been given to his mother's connection with the case.

In support of the insanity theory upon which Judge Olcott is proceeding in Thaw's behalf, the text of the codicil which old William Thaw added to his will, and which practically disinherited Harry Thaw, was sent yesterday from Pittsburg.

Considered Thaw Mentally Unfit.

It shows that his father considered Thaw mentally unfit for responsibility, in consequence placing his inheritance with executors.

Supplementing his written statement of Tuesday, in which he repudiated the insanity plea, Harry Thaw made a verbal statement yesterday in which he asserted he was sane. Judge Olcott said that he permitted Thaw to break his silence on Tuesday because his client had "pestered" him so much.

In talking to newspaper men yesterday, Thaw said:

"Too much publicity cannot be given to my statement of last night. What I said then is absolutely true. I am in good mental and physical condition. The reason I did not take exercise yesterday was not illness. It was due to the fact that I was engaged with my counsel. Furthermore, I was reading and writing letters."

Fought for Permission.

Asked whether Tuesday's statement was given out against the advice of his counsel, the prisoner said:

"Well, I had to do a little fighting to get permission to make the statement. My lawyers advised me that there was no necessity for me to deny false stories. It would do no good and I would soon get tired of it. But I persisted, and won.

"I don't see why so much interest is being taken by the public in the return of my mother. Of course I am anxious to see her, but her presence here has no interest for the public.

"All our family were anxious to have mother stay over there. She has rheumatism and we urged her to take the cure at Schinznach, Switzerland. I wish she had stayed abroad."

HARRY THAW WAS DISINHERITED IN HIS FATHER'S WILL

By Boston American Leased Wire.

PITTSBURG, July 12.—When the late William Thaw, father of Harry Kendall Thaw, signed his will on July 5, 1889, he also signed a codicil which to all intents and purposes disinherited Harry.

The precise wording of the codicil is so important in affecting the fact of young Thaw that it will doubtless be produced at the trial. The legal text, while cold and formal, seems an expression, wrung unwillingly from a living father, of the fear he entertained that Harry had shown marked symptoms of irresponsibility before attaining his majority. The codicil is as follows:

"I, William Thaw, do make, publish and declare this codicil to be last will and testament above written:

"In my said will I have directed the allotment of one of the equal shares of my estate to my son, Harry Kendall Thaw, the payment, assignment, delivery or conveyance of one-fourth thereof to him at majority and of the income from the remaining three-fourths thereafter.

"With great regret and reluctance, and solely from a sense of duty, I hereby cancel and revoke any and all provisions of my said will directing payment and assignment, delivery or conveyance of money or property to my said son, Harry Kendall Thaw."

DREYFUS VINDICATED AND RESTORED TO RANK

COURT OF CASSATION ANNULS THE VERDICT WITHOUT ORDERING A NEW TRIAL.

PARIS, July 12.—The verdict of the courtmartial of Captain Alfred Dreyfus, by which he was condemned on the charge of betraying the French army secrets to Germany, has been annulled by the Court of Cassation, by which his case was reviewed.

The former verdict is annulled without ordering a new trial, which was the point for which his counsel contended in the rehearing.

As the result of to-day's verdict Captain Dreyfus will re-enter the French army with the stain upon his honor wiped out. A report is current in army circles that his promotion to the rank of a major has already been decided upon, and that he will take a command under this higher rank immediately.

Captain Dreyfus was not in court when the verdict was returned. His brother, Mathieu Dreyfus, who has been a constant attendant at the rehearing, was in the courtroom, and he at once rushed off to carry the good news to Captain Dreyfus, who had awaited him at his home.

Captain Alfred Dreyfus was born at Mulhouse, in Alsace, October 9, 1859. After the Franco-Prussian war he went to Paris to study. In 1880 he became a cadet sub-lieutenant of artillery. After graduation in 1882 he was transferred to the horse batteries of the First Independent Cavalry division at Paris. On October 12 he received first commission as captain in the Twenty-first Regiment of Artillery. He prepared for the school of staff officers and entered in 1890 and was married on April 21 to Mlle. Lucie Hadamard. In 1893 he took service in the general staff of the army. In 1894 he was named for service in an infantry regiment stationed in Paris.

On October 13, 1894, he was arrested on a charge of high treason, it being alleged that he had sold military secrets of France. The first court-martial began on December 19, 1894, and he was found guilty. He was degraded from all rank on January 5 following and sentenced to death, a year later receiving a commutation to life imprisonment on Devil's Island.

After being confined a number of years there he was granted a new trial by the Court of Cassation, which acquitted him.

CITY'S PAINT BILLS GROW SMALL UNDER PUBLICITY

Six Rooms in February Cost Nearly Twice as Much as Fifteen Do Now.

The bright light of publicity has caused the city painting bills to shrink to a figure that is diminutive when compared with the former charges.

Last February the Daniels & Howlett Co. presented a bill of $3,571.95 for painting and cleaning six rooms in City Hall. Attention was called by the press to the ridiculously high prices being charged for city work.

In April the Daniels & Howlett Co. cleaned fifteen rooms in City Hall and painted them. But the bill was not filed immediately. It has just been presented and paid. And its total for fifteen rooms is only $1,902.25.

This makes an interesting comparison with the previous bill, which charged over $3,500 for six rooms.

In the minds of the amused painters, who were not on the job, some one has seen a great light.

The two bills can be compared in various other ways. For instance, in the first bill there was a charge of $340.64 for cleaning the dinky little den the reporters use.

In the present bill there is a charge of only $203.61 for painting and cleaning three rooms in the Lamp Department.

And two out of the three rooms in the Lamp Department, whose total expense is only $203.61, are larger than the one reporters' room, for which $340.64 was charged in the rare old, fair old golden days of last February.

SIX DEAD IN MOTOR TRAGEDY

LONDON, July 12.—Six persons were killed and many injured to-day in an accident to a motor omnibus while on the way to Brighton, the famous seaside resort. While going down Handcross Hill, one of the steepest declines on the road the omnibus overturned, burying the passengers under the wreck or throwing them to the ground. It is feared that several of the injured may die.

ALL SAVED FROM WRECK

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 12.—In a telegram to the Diamond Jo officials here, Clerk J. L. Schnur of the Packet Quincy states that the boat sank in fourteen feet of water about twelve miles from Winona, Minn. He says there was no fire, and that no lives were lost. The upper deck is above water.

Private telegrams from some of the passengers state that the Quincy struck a snag.

BLOODHOUNDS TRAIL MEN WHO WRECK TRAIN

PETERSBURG, Ind., July 12.—An angry mob of armed men, accompanied by bloodhounds, are on the trail of the men who wrecked a freight train on the Southern railroad, eight miles west of this place, causing the deaths of three employees and the loss of thousands of dollars' worth of property to the road.

The train wreckers drove a spike into each end of a switch, evidently not caring whether they wrecked the eastbound or westbound train. The westbound arrived first. It was running at thirty miles an hour when the engine struck the spike. The whole train left the track, the engine toppling over and many cars being demolished.

Both firemen and engineer were so badly scalded that they died a few minutes later, while Luther Capehart of Winslow, a brakeman, had his right arm and left leg cut off and died in a few hours. Two other members of the train crew are dangerously injured and are expected to die. The injured have been taken to Princeton for medical treatment.

The only known cause of the accident is the ill-feeling against the railroad because the company, which owns the Maren mines insisted on running them during the recent trouble between the operators and miners but paid the scale price during the entire time.

WOMEN HEAP TUCKER'S GRAVE WITH FLOWERS

NEARLY 200 ROSES PLACED UPON MOUND BY PERSONS WHO THINK HE WAS INNOCENT.

The grave in Hope Cemetery, Worcester, of Charles Louis Tucker, the young man who died in the electric chair for the murder of Mabel Page, is being kept green with flowers by many men and women, young and old. Although Mrs. Lucy A. Tucker has not been able to leave her husband and home in Auburndale and visit the resting place of her son, she has been informed of the fact that almost continually the little mound in the Tucker lot is being heaped with wreaths and bouquets.

Mrs. Tucker has not yet become reconciled to the death of her son, and the electrocution of John Scmidlofski on Monday added to her horror of the affair, but in the letters of sympathy which still pour in to her from the outside world she finds a never ceasing comfort.

"Kind hearted women are keeping Louis's grave fresh with flowers," said Mrs. Tucker to-day. "Last week 150 beautiful roses were left there, and I know some one will always keep flowers there. Louis had so many friends who came to him in his need. I have not been able to go to my boy's grave since the day of the funeral, but hear so frequently of the many flowers all the young women and older ones have carried to the cemetery it gives me some consolation.

"I am really dependent on the letters I receive," says Mrs. Tucker, and she would feel slighted if a day should pass without at least one letter. There is hardly a delivery which does not bring a dozen or more.

Besides these letters which have come to her there are letters, bundles of them in boxes, which were sent to her son in prison, and which he kept and left to her, a legacy. There are souvenir postal cards, bunches of roses which the young friends of Louis sent him with frequency to brighten the first months of his imprisonment while in Middlesex jail.

SUPPORTERS INSIST "HOULIHAN AVENUE" SIGN SHALL STAY PUT

Board Placed in Position by Michael McGrail Remains on Brookline Thoroughfare.

The Advocates of "North Street," However, Are Still Showing Fight.

The "Houlihan Avenue" sign which was triumphantly put up by Michael McGrail on that Brookline thoroughfare remains in position today, in spite of the opposition, which is determined that the avenue shall have its name changed to North street.

It is expected that an attempt will be made by the "North street" faction to pull down this new "Houlihan" sign, just as previous "Houlihan" signs have been pulled down. On the other hand, the "Houlihan" supporters say that they will see that the new sign stays where it has been put.

This new sign which McGrail put up makes the eighth one that has been erected and as speedily torn down. A few nights ago a North street sign was put up by Fire Captain Bernard F. Dwyer, the leader of the "North streeters."

Patrick Flannery, one of the staunch supporters of the "Houlihanites," promptly smashed down Captain Dwyer's sign. Another was put up the next night. Again the Flannery axe destroyed it.

Things were quiet for a day or so. Then early yesterday the "North streeters" stole a march on the opposition and put up another sign. At daybreak it was torn down by watchful "Houlihanites." Then, at 11 o'clock yesterday, Mr. McGrail came out with the new sign "Houlihan avenue," mounted on a stout post. That was defiantly erected and was guarded by McGrail and some fifty friends. It is still standing. The opposition's next move is awaited with lively eagerness.

MAINE LIGHT AND POWER IN TRUST NOW

Standard Oil Company Pours Out Millions to Consumate Gigantic Merger.

Special to the Boston American.

PORTLAND, Me., July 12.—In the hands of the Standard Oil, Maine's most important commercial enterprise, the electric lighting and power plants, is grasped. The secret is out that the great trust is behind the enormous transfers of the big corporations of the State made in the past few weeks. Millions have been spent in acquiring monopolies in Lewiston, Auburn, Bar Harbor and this city, and it is evident that one hand controls the entire business.

In each section where negotiations have been made, local capitalists retain a minor part of the stock. Carl Dennett and J. R. Graham, both Bangor bankers, and C. S. Eraswell of Chicago represent the New York and Philadelphia interests, and the statement has been made that the Standard Oil will not confine itself to Maine in securing a monopoly of this profitable supply business.

Lost All by Earthquake; Boy Will Sell Americans

Only 14, Will Support Mother and Little Brother, Whom He Brought From San Francisco.

The latest refugee from San Francisco is little Sam Rappeport, who has traveled all the way to Boston to earn his living and that of his mother. He will begin to-day by selling BOSTON AMERICANS.

Although the little fellow is handicapped by a lame foot, he is courageous and sturdily maintains that all he wants is an opportunity to work.

With his mother and younger brother Sam came to Boston a few weeks ago from Hearst's Relief Camp in San Francisco. His father is a traveling man and from the time of the earthquake his family has not heard from him. He was away from home at that time. The mother and her two sons lived on Harrison avenue and on April 18, when the terrible disaster fell upon the city, their home and all their clothing was burned.

Not hearing from the father the Rappeport family came to Boston on one of the free trains, because the mother has a cousin here where the three can stop until work is obtained. So at present they are living at No. 19 North Russell street.

Sam, who is 14 and small for his age, sold SAN FRANCISCO EXAMINERS after the disaster, and so his first thought when he came to Boston was to join the big army of BOSTON AMERICAN newsboys.

A BRAVE BOY FROM FRISCO.

He will sell BOSTON AMERICANS here to support his mother and little brother, who lost everything by earthquake and fire.

Y., July 12.—A two trolley car train from Lockport to Tonawanda ran into an open switch at a siding just east of Martinsville last night and crashed into a trolley freight motor and a train of seven freight cars. Five passengers were killed outright and a score injured, some of whom may die.

The dead: John Ritteiman, motorman, Lockport; Charles T. Hutcheson, negro, Lockport; unknown woman; girl and boy, supposed to be brother and sister, names unknown.

CUT RATE ICE FIRM ON WATCH FOR FIREBUG

LYNN, July 12.—Reardon & Bamford, who style themselves the "Outlaw Ice Dealers," and who went into business this year with the announced intention of bringing the price of ice down to bounds, assert that a firebug has designs on their large icehouses on the shore of Lake Gardener, Amesbury, and that two unsuccessful attempts have already been made to burn them and thereby destroy several thousand tons of ice.

The firm has issued a statement, in which they say, in part: "If John B. Moran wants any ice trust facts he had better get next to us. We've got a whole bundle of them."

Mr. Reardon says that he has received a letter from the foreman of their Amesbury houses saying that two different mornings he found traces of a blaze among the hay in the ice houses. The hay was very damp, blocks of ice being around it, and it was on this account that it went out before it had time to set fire to the building. Friday morning, when he went to the same ice house he found burned hay in another place.

Mr. Reardon intimates that the attempts indicate that some one wants to put the firm out of business because they are cutting the price of ice.

NEWS OF LABOR.

James Wilson of New York, president of the Pattern Makers' League of America, arrived in this city yesterday from Worcester and addressed a meeting of the Boston Pattern Makers' Association last night in Unity Hall. He was accompanied by the following general officers: James Gernon of New York, first vice president; A. B. MacStay of New York, one of the board of directors of the eastern district and business agent of the New York association, and J. J. Jung of New York, general secretary of the eastern district.

At a conference with the local executive board plans were formulated for a thorough organization of the pattern makers of the New England states.

President Wilson stated that since the inauguration of the new system of organization last August by districts the membership has increased by about 1000. Mr. Wilson leaves Boston for England August 17 in company with Frank K. Foster of this city as fraternal delegate from the American Federation of Labor to the British Trades Congress. He leaves for Providence today.

INDORSE POLITICAL PLAN.

Independent political action, as outlined at the recent Faneuil Hall convention to protest against the overtime bill, was indorsed by Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' Union last night. The members voted to join the various Wage Earners' Clubs which are being formed in every section of the city. A communication was referred to the Bankers' Loan Association because it did not bear the label of the Allied Printing Trades Council.

Daniel M. Kelley and Thomas F. Keough were elected delegates to the meeting to form a building trades section July 30. The following delegates to the Chelsea Central Labor Union were elected: Henry Kelley, William Murray, John Laws, Charles Keegan, John Nesbitt, Thomas F. Keough, William Boyd, Charles Barge and Harvey Smith. William Connor of the Building Trades Council urged that the union have every man in line in the Labor Day parade. Three new candidates were admitted.

FIRST DEATH IN YEARS.

Electrical Workers' Union No. 103 passed resolutions of sympathy on the death of John W. Finn at Roxbury at last night's meeting. Mr. Finn was the first member to die in seven years. The recently elected officers were installed by Past President Fred J. Reardon. Four candidates were initiated and five applications received.

LABOR NOTES.

The delegates to the convention of the Brotherhood of Teamsters at Chicago will meet for instructions tomorrow night at the teamsters' headquarters on Causeway street.

Hoisting and Portable Engineers' Union No. 4 agrees on the matter of parading Labor Day at [illegible] meeting.

Arrangements will be completed for the [illegible] Frank K. Foster at [illegible] Tuesday night in Wells Memorial building. Mr. Foster sails for England Aug. 17 to attend the British Trades Congress as fraternal delegate from the American Federation of Labor.

The proposition to parade Labor Day comes up at the meeting of Cigarmakers' Union No. 97 tomorrow night.

PACKERS' AGENTS DENY POISON IN THEIR GOODS

Representatives of the meat packers are busy today with denials.

As in the publication of the McNeil-Reynolds report which first told the public of the horrible conditions in Packingtown, the report yesterday of the State Board of Health, proving by analysis the presence of poisonous preservatives, refuse and foreign substances in many of the "delicacies" offered by the meat trust, is followed by vigorous denials by agents of the trust.

Trade Badly Hit.

Regardless of the protestations of the meat men, the report of the State authorities is generally regarded as another severe jolt for the packing industry. The sale of canned meats, according to dealers, has already suffered immeasurably by the President's crusade against Packingtown. Condemnation by Massachusetts experts, it is said, adds fuel to the fire that the millionaire packers have already found beyond their control.

The investigation by the State Board included 150 samples.

The various brands of chicken, potted chicken, devilled chicken, boned chicken and chicken loaf, as well as ham, beef, tongue and veal in their various forms, were found in many instances to contain all sorts and conditions of meat.

Scraps and Feathers.

Scraps, epidermis, blood vessels, bone and feathers are not uncommon ingredients, according to the report, while corn meal, although no recognized by any of the food authorities as a component of canned meats, was found in almost every tin examined.

The packing house men endeavor to meet the findings of the health board's report with charges of partiality and favoritism toward Eastern and Massachusetts firms.

"Anyone, analyst or layman," said Manager R. L. Clark of the Libby, McNeil & Libby Company yesterday, "is cordially welcomed to enter our big storehouse and select a canned article at random and have it analyzed for publication. We know it will stand any fair test.

"For years our firm has believed, from perhaps a mercenary standpoint, that the best way to sell goods is to obtain regular customers by putting out pure and satisfactory goods."

Will Ignore Report.

F. G. Towne of Winchester, who has charge of the Van Camp Packing Company's interests in New England, was open in his condemnation of the report of the State Board of Health.

"The report is erroneous, at least in so much as it refers to canned goods sold by the Van Camp Company," said Mr. Towne last night. "As a company we shall probably ignore the report entirely, but for myself I wish to make a denial al the way through."

SAILOR FALLS TO SEA FROM CHAIR; DROWNS

JAMESTOWN, R. I., July 12.—While working on a yacht in the harbor yesterday Hjalmar Olsen of Cambridge, a sailor, fell from a swinging chair into the water and was drowned. Boats were put out, but none of them reached the man in time.

28 DAYS have elapsed since the BOSTON AMERICAN filed with the Attorney-General a formal information and petition that he bring suit to force the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and the Boston & Albany Railroad to obey the law and to abandon the competing trolley lines which they have illegally acquired.

Why does the Attorney-General delay?

MRS JOHN SAWYER
PURDY PHOTO
AMES PHOTO

BRIDES WHO WED IN SECRET.

Friends of One, Thinking They Were Going to Wedding, Find Her Already a Bride.

Ethel E. Milkins of Lynn and Annie Heselton of Wakefield Fig-Figure in Similar Romances.

A Lynn society girl and a Wakefield mill girl, both of whom have been married for several months, but who have only just announced that fact, give striking illustration of how Dan Cupid works slyly in both the favored circles of society life and in the workaday world. To-day both brides and their bridegrooms are being chided by their friends for keeping the facts of their marriage quiet for so long.

Undoubtedly neither of these couples knows the other. But in each case the young people decided to have a secret wedding. Nor did they tell their friends about it till they were good and ready.

The Lynn society girl is Mrs. George L. Robinson, formerly Miss Ethel E. Milkins. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Milkins of No. 101 Eastern avenue. She was graduated from Lynn High School this last term and was, so her friends expected, to have been married last Tuesday night at her home to George L. Robinson, a clubman and wealthy manufacturer.

When the friends came to the house they were demurely told by the blushing girl that she had been a bride since last Washington's Birthday. On that day she and Mr. Robinson went to Natick and were married by the Rev. H. A. Pease. They kept it a secret till the bride should be graduated. But the bride told her mother a few days after the marriage. No one else was taken into the secret.

The couple were laughingly congratulated and the expected wedding developed into the wedding reception.

The Wakefield mill girl was Miss Annie Heselton, now Mrs. John Sawyer. She was employed in the Harvard Knitting Mill of Wakefield and lived in the lodging house in Reading where Mr. Sawyer made his home.

Last Saturday Miss Heselton confided to some of the other mill girls that she was about to leave the mill and, furthermore, that she was married in Boston last May to Mr. Sawyer.

She was roundly upbraided by the other girls for not letting them into the secret before. But she laughingly protested that she and her husband did not want it known then.

Mr. and Mrs. Sawyer have just left Reading for Andover, where they will make their home in the future.

An Ornament To The Kitchen

Here's an oil stove that burns ordinary kerosene oil. For appearance, safety and all-round cooking efficiency it is fully equal to a coal or wood range and far more economical. Moreover, think of the cool comfort, convenience and satisfaction that result from using a stove that will bake, broil, boil, roast or toast on the hottest days without heating up the kitchen.

THE Florence Automatic Oil Stove

is mechanically perfect; the oil level is self-regulating and the flame always under absolute control. There is no dirt, no smoke, no soot, no leaky valves, no wicks to trim. No other form of stove will do your cooking so cheaply, so quickly or so economically as the Florence Automatic—no other stove is so light and strong—so attractive in appearance.

Florence Automatic Oil Stoves are sold by dealers generally. If your dealer does not sell them send for our illustrated catalogue giving full description, or call at our store, Central Oil & Gas Stove Co., 17 Washington St., Boston, and see the daily demonstration of cooking on the Florence Automatic Oil Stove.

Record Breaking Purchase of Women's Shoes

Now a Rousing Sale

The best and greatest shoe transaction ever recorded in the annals of department store enterprise has just been closed, and the Siegel chain of stores secures, throughout the year, the entire accumulation of "factory checked" shoes from the largest manufacturer of women's shoes in the United States.

These shoes are advertised extensively all over the country and are known as the acme of shoe perfection. They have the style, the grace and all the outlines of high-grade footwear. They retail at $3.00 and $3.50 a pair, and if we would mention the name of the maker we would have a tremendous crowd in our shoe section Friday and Saturday. Those who read this advertisement must take our word for it that the values are the strongest we have ever offered.

What "Factory Checked" Means

For instance, if a patent leather tip is checked, or the upper should show a knife mark, or if the shoe has any imperfection, however slight, it is thrown aside as "factory damaged." Examine these shoes carefully, and it will be difficult to discern the imperfections.

$1.95 A PAIR The lot consists of 2,000 pairs women's oxfords, made of all kinds of leathers, suitable for summer wear, such as patent colt, patent kid, black kid and tan. The sale will continue Friday and Saturday, when these superb $3.00 and $3.50 shoes will go on sale at .... $1.95 A PAIR

REAL 'SOUTH BEFO' DE WAH' AT WONDERLAND

BACK TO FIRST PRINCIPLES

Amid the babel of sounds arising in Wonderland at Revere Beach, an old plantation melody sung by half a score of dusky vocalists, collects a great crowd at the facade of the newly opened theatre. "My Old Kentucky Home," the American song that Prince Henry of Prussia thought was the greatest musical composition he heard in America, never sounded sweeter than when voiced by this flock of black birds.

Wonderland is a land of novelties and the latest is "The South Before the War." This show harks back to the days of slavery, when cotton was king and the city darkey, now universally portrayed upon the stage, was as unknown as the problem drama, back to the days when negro minstrelsy, the only form of theatrical entertainment strictly indigenous to this country, was the vogue. It paved the way for vaudeville and the continuous performance. The late Dion Boucicault said it was the grand-dad of musical comedy.

Almost all of the eminent comedians of a past generation "blacked up" at some time of their stage career. Edwin Booth appeared in burnt cork and Joseph Jefferson made his debut as a miniature Jim Crow when introduced in an encore act by Daddy Rice.

Songs Touch the Heart.

When the white man in cork began to wane in popularity, the genuine negro came to take his place. Williams and Walker, Cole and Johnson and scores of others are successors to imitative performers, who in comparison were like queer money beside a dollar fresh from the mint.

The modern stage darkey is the coon of the race track and the city street. Rag time is a far cry from the plantation melodies which have become classical because they touched the heart and tunefully clung to memory's ear like the most persistent of musical burrs. They had a plaintive cadence as a rule and were perfections often of improvisions by African slaves who survived the horrors of the middle passage to work to death in tobacco and cotton fields in the sunny South. Many of the original plantation songs by darkeys were reminiscent of the hymns their masters sung. The cake walk was a negro-quarter imitation of the stately Virginia reel.

Back to First Principles.

Down in Wonderland and in "The South Before the War" there is an attempt to get back to first principles. It is a show by genuine blacks—written by one and performed by him and others. "Uncle Eph's Return" is the name of the sketch by Billy Nichols, stage manager, author and performer. Uncle Eph comes back to a plantation on the banks of the Suwanee River after twenty years in the North. He has run away from slavery, hoping to earn enough to buy the freedom of Aunt Hannah and the children. He finds the children have grown up and that the Union army has broken their bondage. In the background of the scene is a cotton field whitened by a ripened crop and bordering the river by a steamboat landing. The story is baldly simple, but it serves its turn.

Uncle Eph is played by one Billy Copes, who is a character worth passing mention. Copes is a genuine Southern negro. He was born in Newbern, N. C., and raised there. He is the kind of negro that Southern whites swear by. His good manners are as natural as his skin. To hear him speak of his mother and his sisters is worth while. Copes is a real actor. There is the genuine touch to his impersonation of the old man. There is good shading, fine appreciation and no exaggeration at all. Sure dramatic instinct takes him straight to the mark with every gesture and intonation. He sings well, too, his voice being of rich through raw timbre, and he knows phrasing better than a lot of balladists of rank. He was one of the Williams and Walker company which took London by storm.

Have a Good "Ballyho."

The oldest member of the company which plays "Uncle Eph's Return" is Mme. Rose Wilson. She has been on the stage many years and has a soprano voice as sweet as honey. It is worth the time and the price to hear her sing "Where the Suwanee River Flows." Other women and girls are Jennie Hudson, Dorothy Hardenbergh, Georgiana Harris, Blanche Wallace, Mamie Bowles and Alma Diamond. In the company, too, are William Pearsall, Roger Wilson, King Charles and Otis Benson, "the dancing darkey." Benson is a very clever dancer and has more finish to his work than the average rag time stepster.

The musician of the company is William F. Roberts. "I'm a composer," he explained. "My partner writes songs and I the music. Concert work is my line. No, I don't parade. I'm a musician." Roberts feels the dignity of his calling as much as Mr. Paderewski.

The byplay in front of the show, done to draw the crowd and gain patronage, in showman's parlance is called the "ballyho." White performers as a rule dislike this kind of work. They think it is earning money hard. But the colored artists take to it with fine cheer. Indeed, one of the chief attractions of this entertainment, indoors and out, is the heartiness of the colored folks. They never tire of singing in their full-throated, mellow tones, and they like to jump, dance and commit themselves to antics. Spontaneity is theirs. Full of animal spirits and with lilt in legs and voices, they delight in entertaining.

Art is fine beyond doubt, but when you see the "coon" cutting up on the stage you are seeing what is mostly nature, and it requires no culture to appreciate the primitive. Before the show is given the colored play actors march in the parade around the big Wonderland plaza. Right behind ride the cowboys. Bang! Bang! go the Western plainsmen's revolvers, and they get the muzzles as near the legs of the sable performers as they can be got. This is the playful Western spirit that on its native heath leads to shooting up the town. It makes the colored folks jump. But as anything provocative of that is welcome, the cowboy jest is not resented. It is a good time all the time for this bunch of brunettes from the Ham tree.

ARREST MAN; CHARGE $50,000 DIAMOND THEFT

NEW YORK, July 12.—James Stellman, an engineer, twenty-four years old, of Brooklyn, is under arrest to-day charged with complicity in a $50,000 diamond robbery, which occurred in London on March 14, 1905.

The victim of the robbery was a salesman for a firm of French jewelers, Elattauer Brothers. It is alleged by the police that Stellman and a man named Lockett followed the salesman when he entered a drug store in London and changed his satchel for one looking identically the same.

TRAIN KILLS AGED WOMAN.

ST. JOHN, N. B., July 12.—Mrs. Michael Gallagher, seventy-five years of age, was killed by a train about fifteen miles from here yesterday. It is supposed she failed to hear its aproach.

Packingtown Victim at Harvesting Work

What with plenty to eat and fresh air and exercise that was taken as it pleased him, he would waken from his sleep and start off not knowing what to do with his energy, stretching his arms, laughing, singing old songs of home that came back to him.

Now and then, of course, he could not help but think of little Antanas, whom he should never see again, whose little voice he should never hear; and then he would have to battle with himself.

Sometimes at night he would waken dreaming of Ona and stretch out his arms to her, and wet the ground with his tears. But in the morning he would get up and shake himself, and stride away again to battle with the world.

He never asked where he was nor where he was going; the country was big enough, he knew, and there was no danger of his coming to the end of it. And, of course, he could always have company for the asking—everywhere he went there were men living just as he lived, and whom he was welcome to join.

He was a stranger at the business, but they were not clannish, and they taught him all their tricks—what towns and villages it was best to keep away from, and how to read the secret signs upon the fences, and when to beg and when to steal, and just how to do both.

They laughed at his ideas of paying for anything with money or with work—for they got all they wanted without either. Now and then Jurgis camped out with a gang of them in some woodland haunt and foraged with them in the neighborhood at night.

And then among them someone would "take a shine" to him, and they would go off together and travel for a week, exchanging reminiscences.

Of these professional tramps a great many had, of course, been shiftless and vicious all their lives. But the vast majority of them had been working-men, had fought the long fight as Jurgis had, and found that it was a losing fight, and given up.

Later on he encountered yet another sort of men, those from whose ranks the tramps were recruited, men who were homeless and wandering, but still seeking work—seeking it in the harvest fields.

Of these there was an army, the huge surplus labor army of society; called into being under the stern system of nature, to do the casual work of the world, the tasks which were transient and irregular, and yet which had to be done. They did not know that they were such, of course; they only knew that they sought the job, and that the job was fleeting.

In the early summer they would be in Texas, and as the crops were ready they would follow north with the season, ending with the fall in Manitoba. Then they would seek out the big lumber-camps, where there was Winter work; or, failing in this, would drift to the cities, and live upon what they had managed to save, with the help of such transient work as was there,—the loading and unloading of steamships and drays, the digging of ditches and the shovelling of snow.

If there were more of them on hand than chanced to be needed, the weaker ones died off of cold and hunger, again according to the stern system of nature.

The Harvest Fever

It was in the latter part of July, when Jurgis was in Missouri, that he came upon the harvest work. Here were crops that men had worked for three or four months to prepare, and of which they would lose nearly all unless they could find others to help them for a week or two.

So all over the land there was a cry for labor—agencies were set up, and all the cities were drained of men, even college boys were brought by the carload, and hordes of frantic farmers would hold up trains and carry off wagon loads of men by main force.

Not that they did not pay them well—any man could get two dollars a day and his board, and the best men could get two dollars and a half or three.

The harvest fever was in the very air, and no man with any spirit in him could be in that region and not catch it. Jurgis joined a gang and worked from dawn till dark, eighteen hours a day, for two weeks without a break.

Then he had a sum of money that would have been a fortune to him in the old days of misery—but what could he do with it now? To be sure he might have put it in a bank, and, if he were fortunate, get it back again when he wanted it.

But Jurgis was now a homeless man, wandering over a continent; and what did he know about banking and drafts and letters of credit? If he carried the money about with him he would surely be robbed in the end; and so what was there for him to do but enjoy it while he could?

On a Saturday night he drifted into a town with his fellows; and because it was raining, and there was no other place provided for him, he went to a saloon. And there were some who treated him and whom he had to treat, and there was laughter and singing and good cheer; and then out of the rear part of the saloon a girl's face, red cheeked and merry, smiled at Jurgis, and his heart thumped suddenly in his throat.

He nodded to her, and she came and sat by him, and they had more drink, and then he went upstairs into a room with her, and the wild beast rose up within him and screamed as it has screamed in the jungle from the dawn of time.

Night of Rioting

And then because of his memories and his shame he was glad when others joined them, men and women; and they had more drink and spent the night in wild rioting and debauchery. In the van of the surplus labor army there followed another, an army of women, they also struggling for life under the stern system of nature.

Because there were rich men who sought pleasure, there had been ease and plenty for them so long as they were young and beautiful; and later on, when they were crowded out by others younger and more beautiful, they went out to follow upon the trail of the working men. Sometimes they came of themselves, and the saloon-keepers shared with them; or sometimes they were handled by agencies, the same as the labor army.

They were in the towns in harvest time, near the lumber camps in the Winter, in the cities when the men came there; if a regiment were encamped, or a railroad or canal being made, or a great exposition getting ready, the crowd of women were on hand, living in shanties or saloons or tenement rooms, sometimes eight or ten of them together.

In the morning Jurgis had not a cent, and he went out upon the road again. He was sick and disgusted, but, after the new plan of his life, he crushed his feelings down.

He had made a fool of himself, but he could not help it now—all he could do was to see that it did not happen again. So he tramped on until exercise and fresh air banished his headache, and his strength and joy returned.

This happened to him every time, for Jurgis was still a creature of impulse, and his pleasures had not yet become business. It would be a long time before he could be like the majority of these men of the road, who roamed until the hunger for drink and for women mastered them, and then went to work with a purpose in mind and stopped when they had the price of a spree.

A Living Ghost

On the contrary, try as he would, Jurgis could not help being made miserable by his conscience. It was the ghost that would not down. It would come upon him in the most unexpected places—sometimes it fairly drove him to drink.

One night he was caught by a thunderstorm, and he sought shelter in a little house just outside of a town. It was a workingman's home, and the owner was a Slav like himself, a new emigrant from White Russia; he bade Jurgis welcome in his home language and told him to come to the kitchen fire and dry himself. He had no bed for him, but there was straw in the garret, and he could make out.

The man's wife was cooking the supper, and their children were playing about on the floor. Jurgis sat and exchanged thoughts with him about the old country, and the places where they had been and the work they had done. Then they ate and afterward sat and smoked and talked more about America, and how they found it.

In the middle of a sentence, however, Jurgis stopped, seeing that the woman had brought a big basin of water and was proceeding to undress her youngest baby. The rest had crawled into the closet where they slept, but the baby was to have a bath, the workingman explained.

The nights had begun to be chilly, and his mother, ignorant as to the climate in America, had sewed him up for the Winter; then it had turned warm again, and some kind of a rash had broken out on the child. The doctor had said she must bathe him every night, and she, foolish woman, believed him.

A Man of Woes

Jurgis scarcely heard the explanation; he was watching the baby. He was about a year old, and a sturdy little fellow, with soft fat legs and a round ball of a stomach and eyes as black as coals.

His pimples did not seem to bother him much, and he was wild with glee over the bath, kicking and squirming and chuckling with delight, pulling at his mother's face and then at his own little toes.

KENIBBS LAID AT REST TO-DAY

William P. Kenibbs, known as the founder of the League of Spanish War Veterans, was buried to-day from St. Joseph's Church, Circuit street, Roxbury. Mass was said by the Rev. Fr. Thomas Moylan, and interment was a Mount Hope Cemetery. Kenibbs died from six wounds received at the battle of El Caney, and since that time has been in poor health. He passed away at Lawrenceville, Vt., where he had gone to recuperate.

MUST SHOW THEIR COLORS TO LABOR MEN

Candidates Asked to Place Themselves on Leading Issues With Federation.

MUST ANSWER QUESTIONS

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 12.—Demanding a clear "Yes" or "No" answer, the American Federation of Labor has sent to candidates for Congress and State Legislatures four questions as to whether they will support issues favored by the federation.

These are the queries by the Federation to candidates:

No. 1—If elected will you vote only for such candidate or candidates for the United States Senate as have promised in writing to vote to abolish government by injunction, to install the eight-hour day in government contract work and to install the advisory initiative and advisory referendum, the details to conform to the measures we herewith enclose, subject to such minor changes in the last mentioned system as may be agreed to by the legal executive committees of the A. F. of L. and the National Grange?

No. 2—If elected, will you vote to instruct the hold-over senators—instruct them to vote for the above described measures?

No. 3—If elected, will you help to enact a statute whereby 5 per cent of the voters of the state, calculated on the basis of the last vote for Governor, may call a special election for a referendum vote on a proposition to instruct United States Senators, if one or both of them shall fail to obey the legislature's instructions?

No. 4—Do you promise that if elected you will help to enact a statute that shall supply the machinery for verifying signatures to national petitions, and the taking of a referendum vote when so decided by Congress, the details to conform to the measure we herewith submit, subject to such minor changes as may be agreed to by the executive committees of the A. F. of L. and the National Grange?

DOUGLAS FOR CITYOWNERSHIP

In a letter to the Brockton Board of Aldermen, Ex-Governor William L. Douglas, protesting against the granting of a franchise to a new telephone company on the ground that it will mean a duplication of service and extra expense to customers, comes out flat-footedly for the municipal ownership of public monopolies. Ex-Governor Douglas says:

"I believe the time is not far distant when all public utilities which are necessarily monopolies will be owned and operated under the direction of the city governments. In my opinion all that prevents headway being made in municipal ownership is the fear of the voters that politics would enter into the management of municipal plants, which would have a tendency to eliminate the profits which should accrue for the benefit of the people. I have no doubt the people will soon be ready to vote for municipal ownership of public utilities managed on the same plan as our private corporations."

IN DEADLY CURRENT, MOTHER SAVES BABE

WOONSOCKET, R. I., July 12.—By a daring descent of a ten-foot wall bordering the Social Mill trench yesterday, Mrs. J. R. Trudel saved her three-year-old child, who had fallen into the water. If the mother had not come to the rescue the fast current would have swept the child to its death.

LIME LIGHT ON WORCESTER ICE COMBINE

GETS BIG CORPORATIONS

WORCESTER, July 12.—Worcester ice heads are to be placed on the probe rack by District Attorney Taft next week. The alleged combine, which is said to have caused a recent advance in local prices, will be rigidly investigated.

Some time ago a special committee of the City Council reported that four leading ice companies were charging the same identical price for ice in lots of the same number of pounds. District Attorney Taft will institute a line of investigation to determine whether or not this coincidence indicates collusion among the ice dealers against the people.

THE LAST 2 DAYS

In which the sick can take advantage of the liberal offer of the Osmo-Chemic Specialists. $5 a month for treatment and medicine until cured to all who begin treatment on or before July 14th. This offer will positively not be extended or renewed. Free consultation—examination with the perfected X-Ray and urinary analysis. Don't delay! Why pay more?

Only two days remain of the Osmo-Chemic Physicians' offer. All patients who begin treatment on or before July 14th will be treated until cured at the extremely low fee of five dollars per month; this includes all medicine needed. There will be no further charge or assessment for anything. This includes free consultation, examination with the perfected X-Ray, that reveals hidden diseases, and careful urinary analysis. Why pay more?

The Osmo-Chemic physicians' equipment is the best in the city of Boston. They have the largest practice in the State of Massachusetts, and have more testimonials from cured patients than any medical concern in the State.

LEUCODESCENT RAYS

What the Leucodescent Rays do:
(1) The "Leucodescent" Rays not only increase the nutrition of living animals and vegetable cells, thus promoting tissue-metabolism, but they are a powerful destroyer of germ life — bacteria, etc.
(2) The germ-destroying power of the light is in direct ratio to its intensity, which up to a certain degree of concentration, is in no way destructive to healthy animal tissue.
(3) It is the only therapeutic light that can be used with certainty of results and absolute safety in its application.
(4) That it is a pain-reliever by its intense, vibratory, rhythm-restoring force upon the nerve cell.

ARTIST TOBY'S WIFE
Tells of Her Experience With the Marvellous New Light Treatment of the Osmo-Chemic Experts.
Mrs. Elsie Toby, who resides at 173 Charles street, city, is the wife of the well known artist, Louis Toby, who executed the plaster designs in Keith's beautiful Boston theatre. He is now engaged in ornamenting a large New York city church. Mrs. Toby contracted a severe case of blood poisoning that threatened her life. She relates her experience with the Osmo-Chemic physicians as follows: "I had been sick for months from blood poison, I was treated by a number of prominent physicians, who charged me large fees but did me no good. I became so thin and weak that I was barely able to walk. Making a supreme effort I arrived at the office of the Osmo-Chemic physicians. The success of their wonderful new light treatment was immediately apparent, and now, after a short course of treatment, I am well able to perform all my duties. Should I ever again have occasion to need the services of a skilled physician I will immediately consult the Osmo-Chemic phyicians."

To the Osmo-Chemic Specialists:
Gentlemen—I feel constrained to express to you my great satisfaction over the success of your treatment of my case of poor digestion, which had troubled me for years and had yielded to no other treatment.
My general health became seriously impaired by reason of this trouble, and I am glad to state that you have given me greater relief than I ever dared to hope for, and I feel wholly restored to vigorous health and good for an added ten years of service.
I would not be put back into the condition in which you found me for ten times the cost, if no other help seemed available, and if I had made trial of many things.
Hoping you may help others as much as you have me, I remain, Yours very truly,

Mr. William McConnell Testifies in Favor of the New Light Treatment of the Osmo-Chemic Experts.
Mr. Wm. McConnell of 170 Summer street is a prominent and highly respected dealer in real estate. In writing this testimonial in favor of the Osmo-Chemic physicians he is actuated by the best of motives, i. e., the desire to help the unfortunate sick. He says: "I cannot begin to tell the benefit I derived from the course of treatment I received from the Osmo-Chemic experts. I had suffered for years from catarrh of the head and throat and rheumatism. Although I used numerous remedies, none were successful until I used the Osmo-Chemic New Light treatment. I am thankful that the Osmo-Chemic treatment has cured me, and I am satisfied that the treatment will do all the physicians claim for it. If you are suffering from any disease lose no time, consult the Osmo-Chemic doctors."

Jimmy McAleer with his Mound City troupe of ball tossers got to the Hub this morning to be entertained at the Back Bay park for the rest of the week, and they seemed assured that they will be well treated considering the visit the White Sox had here when they were allowed to depart with four of the five games.

Perhaps the Browns will have an awakening by the home players getting together and getting even for what the White Sox did to them.

The last time the Browns were here they walked off with four straight, but it was the big slump period and history is not likely to repeat itself.

The Browns are putting up a game which meets with great admiration from the St. Louis fans, and they have a great deal of respect for Jimmy McAleer, who has done a lot to build up a team.

Dineen, who is the only winning pitcher now in the ranks, will probably turn the Browns down in the opening game and get things started right.

The windup with the Sox was a sad one, as they got away with the brace of games by the scores of 2 to 1 and 8 to 0. It was anybody's win in the first clash, as the score denotes, and Young was pounding along in fine shape till the Sox stepped on his curves late in the contest, just sufficiently to get the odd score. The old fellow had to extend himself with Altrock doing the trick for the Sox, and it would have simply been a case of luck to beat the Sox with Nick in the box, as he can't lose to the Hub team.

When the fans saw what a splendid fight the team made in the first game they looked for better things in the second but were doomed to disappointment, as the team fell down under the strain and with Harris considerably off his feed the game developed into a question of Boston preventing a shut out.

Glaze was sent to the rubber after the game was lost in the sixth and the youngster gave a very creditable performance, while misplays were being made all around him. His feat of pulling out of the seventh with the bases filled and none out showed him up in his real colors.

For the three innings in which he hurled the pellet only three bingles were made off his throwing.

Isbell's two-bagger in the eighth, when two were on bases, scoring both, won the first game for the Sox. Boston's only tally came in the sixth, when Ferris reached first on a fumble by Isbell and went to second on a sacrifice and got across the plate on two wild pitches.

Pattison pitched an excellent game for the visitors in the second game. He did not issue a pass and not a runner saw third.

WRIGHT LOST CANUCK TITLE

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, Ont., July 12.—Irving Wright of Boston, the present holder of the Niagara International championship trophy, was defeated in the Canadian tennis championship yesterday by G. Field of Buffalo.

Wright was handicapped 15 in each game and was defeated in three straight sets, 6—3, 5—7, 6—0. A. N. Reggio of Boston defeated B. G. Cutler, Buffalo, as did G. Pratt, also of Boston.

E. Y. C. FLEET IS STILL HAVING POOR LUCK

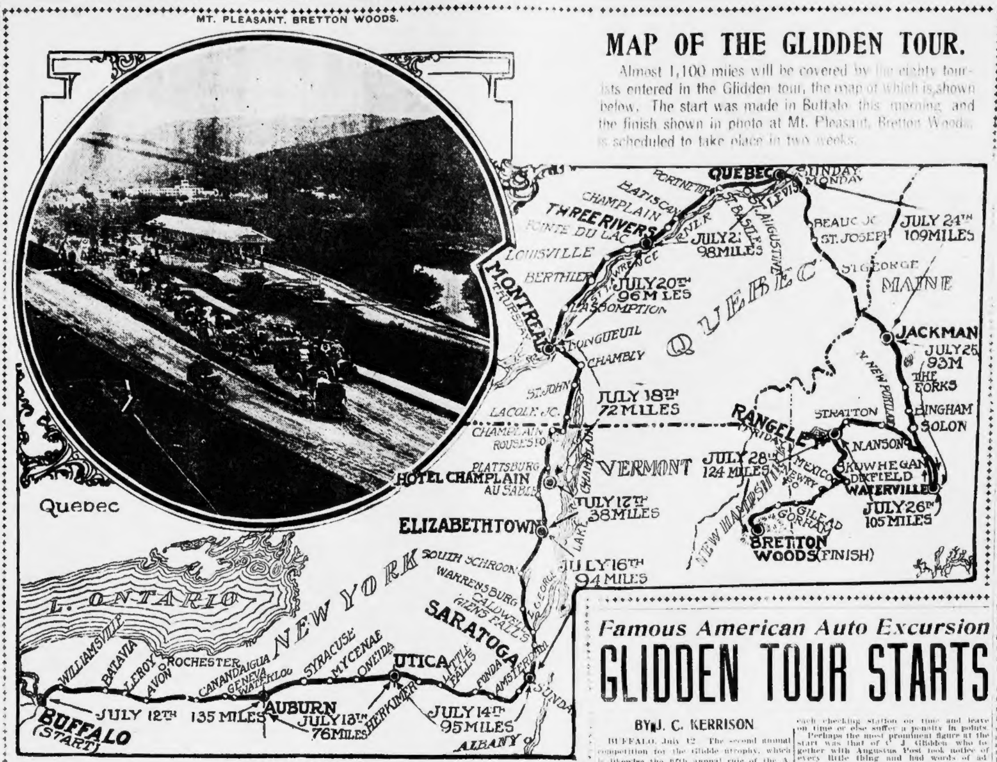
ISLESBORO, Me., July 12.—An early start was made this morning from Park Harbor by the Eastern Yacht Club's fleet, which gathered here yesterday afternoon. The run to-day will be through Eggemoggin Reach, a distance of twenty-five miles. To-morrow the final day's run will be to Bar Harbor.

The regatta committee resorted to towing again and six yachts were strung in line behind the tug Mercury and brought up from Seal Harbor, into which haven they ran after the finish of yesterday's race.

The flagship Constance joined the fleet at Gilkey's harbor shortly after noon, followed by the yawl Vigilant and the schooner Emerald. The schooners Corona and Esperanza remained at Owl's Head for the night and came up this morning to join the others.

WRENN AND FINCKE LOSE.

NEW YORK, July 12.—George L. Wrenn, Jr., and Reginald Fincke were defeated in a five-set match yesterday at the Country Club of Westchester by T. R. Pell and Harry Torrance, 8—6, 6—3, 6—8, 6—1, 6—4.



MAP OF THE GLIDDEN TOUR.

Almost 1,100 miles will be covered by the eighty tourists entered in the Glidden tour, the map of which is shown below. The start was made in Buffalo this morning, and the finish shown in photo at Mt. Pleasant, Bretton Woods, is scheduled to take place in two weeks.

To Get on a Fight With Nelson, Nolan Tells

WHAT JOE GANS MUST DO

CHICAGO, July 12.—Billy Nolan, manager of Battling Nelson, to-day gives an outline of his position on the much-discussed prospect of a battle between Nelson and the great Joe Gans. This is the situation and the prospect for the fight:

BY BILLY NOLAN.

Just to sort of clear up the cloud of talk and settle all the conflicting stories of what I have said about matching Nelson with Joe Gans, I want to make this statement, and make it clear to the fighting public what I am willing to do.

In the first place, we never drew the color line, and don't intend to. I want to declare myself emphatically on that, because I have been frequently misquoted to the effect that we barred Gans because of his color. As long as we sign up to fight Mexicans we won't bar negroes.

Then, "Why don't you fight Gans? Why don't you take on the dinge? You've licked everybody else; see if you can lick him," is what we get everywhere. And the answer is easy. You don't see anybody hanging up any deep-chested offers for the fight, do you? Noticed any $25,000 or $30,000 purses kicking around loose?

Won't Fight for Fun Alone.

Show us the money; that's the main dope. Nelson isn't fighting anybody for love of the game, or because it's his form of amusement, or anything like that. We are looking for the money all the time, and we are not going to take on one of the greatest fighters the world ever saw just for the chance of the glory of beating him.

As soon as this talk is unchained you will probably hear of any number of $25,000 purses at Salt Lake City and Grand Rapids, Mich., and other villages of that class. But we will have to be sighted. There is no use in talking fight until there is something in sight to fight for, and then we will take up some other little points of difference with Mr. Gans.

You can go up along anywhere, and anybody will tell you there that Nelson and Gans would draw $25,000 in a barn, but the dope doesn't show it. There are only one or two places in the country where any fight has a chance to draw that amount of money, and one of these is very much on the blink since the earthquake. And Gans is not a big drawing card. Before you call me down on that look back over his biggest fights and see if he ever drew anything like a really big championship house.

Will Not Fight Welterweights.

There is another very important point. Nelson does not claim to be anything but lightweight champion, and he does not bar any lightweight in the world. But we are not fighting welterweights, and the best welterweight in the world at that. In case it does come to a question of talking fight with Gans, that thing might as well be understood now. Gans will have to make the lightweight limit, which is 133 pounds at the ringside, and he will have to weigh in at that figure. Nelson is not going out of his class to fight him as long as I am managing the Bat.

I am not taking any chances. I haven't any right to. This Gans is a wonder, and he has not gone back to any extent. You can throw out these last few fights. You may remember that Mike Sullivan gave him an awful tussle down in Baltimore, and there are few welters that have anything on Mike. Well, then they went out to the coast and Gans took off the wraps. Curtains for Sullivan and that's what it is for any of these fellows whenever that smoke wants to fight.

Another reason why Gans has no right to expect any the best of it from us is that little affair in Boston. He and Herford made all the trouble they could for us. The Bat and I have pretty good memories, and Gans will have to come to us and our terms when he wants to talk business again.

Speaking of terms, the place where the fight is almost sure to fall through is on the weight question. There is not a chance in the world for Nelson to put on his gloves the night they meet if Gans is an ounce over 133 pounds. THAT IS ABSOLUTELY FINAL. On the other hand, if Gans can get down to 133 pounds at all, much less fight, I am the most misinformed man in the world, and I certainly have Gans's weight sized up wrong. One Aurelio Herrera tried to get away with a big steal by coming into the ring ten pounds over weight and figuring that we would rather take a chance than let the purse get away. The rest is history. We are not taking more than the ordinary fighting chances.

I am willing to admit that we are in no hot hurry to fight Gans, because there are plenty of other things to do. Nelson is busy now on a theatrical tour and doing well. Besides, we have one or two other fights in prospect which will draw nearly as much money as a fight with Gans, and, since that is so, we are not breaking any blood vessels to give the dinge a chance after our last experience with him.

Now you know how we feel about a fight with Gans. Show us a big enough purse, make Gans agree to 133 at the ringside and, WELL, I WILL BE PLENTY WILLING TO TALK BUSINESS.

Remembers Dirty Work.

"However, there is one thing we hold against Gans, and I will remember it as long as I live. It was Gans who acted as Kid Sullivan's second when the latter met Nelson in Baltimore, and it was he who put the ammonia on Sullivan's gloves. It almost blinded Bat, and had he been beaten no one would probably have found out what the real cause was. When a man does this kind of dirty work he cannot ever expect to make a dollar through me, but, as I have repeatedly said, we are in it for the money, and if any club can show me the long green, and the colored boy will make Nelson's weight, we will fight."

GLIDDEN TOUR STARTS

BY J. C. KERRISON

BUFFALO, July 12.—The second annual competition for the Glidden trophy, which is likewise the fifth annual tour of the A. A. A., was inaugurated at 7 o'clock this morning under the finest weather conditions.

The scene at the start was spirited indeed, full of life and activity, and everyone was full of hope and wishing that victory would crown their efforts of the next fourteen days.

In the drive over 1,100 miles the trip is unquestionably designed to be the greatest one in the history of American motoring, and will certainly make history in that line.

It was promptly at 7 o'clock that the locomobile driven by H. S. Knowles started out, and opened the game. Then in close succession came the other sixty odd entrants, including Watson Coleman in a White, J. Otis Draper in a Packard, F. J. Wing in a Marmon, and J. L. Snow in a Peerless representing the Boston contingent.

Schedule for Each Car.

The first day's run is to Auburn, a distance of 135 miles, and each car will run on a schedule throughout. It must reach each checking station on time and leave on time or else suffer a penalty in points.

Perhaps the most prominent figure at the start was that of C. J. Glidden, who together with Augustus Post took notice of every little thing and had words of advice to all.

The arrangements were most admirable, and everything ran smooth as clockwork. Of course it is too early at this time to predict a possible winner. There is a lot of championship material in the sixty odd cars that started, and there is no telling what may happen in the very near future.

There are several air cooled cars in the run, Waverly, Knox, Marmon and Corbin, the first two being entered from Boston by Messrs. Wright and Wing respectively.

W. W. Burke a Starter.

W. W. Burke, formerly of Boston, now of New York, was also among the starters, he driving a big Columbia and being accompanied by Mrs. Burke.

Archie Hughes of Providence was among the early starters, he driving a Pierce Arrow, the same make of car which captured the trophy a year ago.

The confetti cars left Buffalo on the stroke of 5, the pilot car went at 6 and the run itself was started as the whistle blew 7.

W. J. TRAVIS GETS MEDAL PLAY CUP

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., July 12.—Another interesting day is promised over the Englewood Club's golf course to-day when the champions get down to work in the second round of play.

So far, although the weather and turf have not been in extraordinary good shape, the scores turned in have been excellent. W. J. Travis, the double winner of the National trophy and also amateur British champion, was the star of yesterday's play, coming in with a 75, which made his total for the thirty-two holes 152. This score earning for him the medal play trophy. His closest rival, Jerome D. Travers, who has been playing great golf recently, was second on the list, having made 75 on his second run of the links, a total of 155. His 80 was made in a violent thunderstorm.

H. Chandler Egan, the present champion, played a steady game, but he was a stroke behind C. H. Bankhart of Baltimore, who had a total of 158 for the two rounds of the links. The weather conditions favored the players throughout the day's play, and some of the matches were keen enough to thoroughly arouse the galleries who followed them. None carried a larger crowd than that which followed Travis.

Thirty-two qualified in the preliminary round, and at the windup it was found that six were tied for the last two places. This was an unlooked for outcome, but after playing half a dozen holes, Gilman Tiffany of Newburg, N. Y., who last week won the Hudson River League prize, and W. T. West of Philadelphia won out for the chances in the medal play rounds, which will decide the championship during the next three days.

CHICAGO, July 12.—There's no fat on the Tenney team, in fact, the Beans' bunch of braves are right down to the lean meat, and when there's a game on the only extra man sitting on the Boston bench when the team is in the field is the lad who carries the bats, and he isn't a steady traveler with the little party from Pilgrim land.

Yesterday's game showed how skinny the Boston tribe is. When the bell rang for practice there were only eight men to be seen at work for the visitors. Then Pfeffer squeezed through the gate and was crowded to right field. Dolan stopped at second, but that's all. He didn't stop anything else. Fact. It was through him that the score finally rested at 2 to 1 for the Cubs. Gus Dorner, the hard-luck twirler, was in the box for Pilot Tenney's nine, and the way he kept the Cubs climbing the pole was worth watching. The visitors played great ball at that. As usual they made a ninth inning rally and brought the crowd back to the bleachers when they were half way home. Bates connected for two bases with one of Taylor's sharp drops after Brain had been retired. Howard followed suit with another of the same denomination and Bates raced home. Dolan hit to Taylor and Howard was caught tip-toeing to third. Brown was dead-headed but Pfeffer accidentally connected strong enough to retire Brown at second.

PADDOCK GOSSIP OF SALEM TRACK

BY EDWARD E. COGSWELL.

Great weather, good racing and a fair sized crowd out.

Society graced the clubhouse piazza. Not since the opening week have the colors of the ladies predominated as they did yesterday at Salem.

John Hynes greeted the BOSTON AMERICAN reporter in the paddock by saying, "Hello, there! I guess I gave you a dead one last year at Providence in Tommy Wardell. You know that we played him three ways, or across the board, and he was beaten to show not more than a couple of feet." The tip didn't sting the AMERICAN man to any great extent as all he lost was fifty, playing it to show.

John Cheney is one of the most agreeable trainers at the park. He walks on the lawn before the grandstand, and dallies with the millionaires in the clubhouse, with that serene air of a man who has something coming to him. John was not born in Missouri, but his home is on the shores of Lake Champlain, on the New York side.

His first association with racehorses was with the trotters, and, while he was very intimate with a lot of followers of the light harness horse turf, yet no man ever rode a sulky that kept secrets of the horse he was driving better than the same John Cheney.

Since leaving the trotters, like some other trainers, Cheney went over to the runners. Not being connected with that line of the sport very long he is compelled to make his winning horses from green timber. For the past twenty years Cheney has been identified with the turf in both the running and trotting propositions. During this time there is no man who can say that he ever did a wrong, or told an untruth, regarding the condition, or chances, of his horses winning. It is probably that fact which makes him one of the most popular men on the turf to-day.

The patrons of Rockingham Park have got so that they would really miss the County Solicitor, C. H. Batchelder. Every day now he is "Johnny-on-the-Spot" before the first race is called. Whenever he sees three or more men in a group talking with one another, he does the "Hawkshaw" act to his best ability; and woe to the man who should owe to the person he is talking to money borrowed, a gas bill, rent, or other incidentals foreign to a race track, for should he be caught paying his honest bill the County Solicitor would put the worst construction on the passing of United States currency, and this would possibly result in both the innocent parties concerned being arrested for settling their honest debts.

Solicitor Batchelder is designated the Moran of New Hampshire. He has declared to Chief Hawes of the Pinkerton police at the track that he would arrest every person inside the gates if he could find them betting. Unfortunately for the gallant representative of the New Hampshire law, in his sleuth act he has utterly failed to show anything more shocking than would be found at any Sunday school picnic.

OCEAN RACE WAS WON BY YACHT MOPSA

NEW YORK, July 12.—The sloop yacht Mopsa, owned by F. C. and Walter Sullivan of the Harlem Yacht Club, was last night declared the winner of the 400-mile ocean race from New Rochelle around Montauk to Northeast End Light ship off Cape May, N. J., and return to New York, for the challenge cup offered by the Brooklyn Yacht Club.

The Mopsa crossed the finish line in Gravesend Bay at 7:22:40 to-night, making her elapsed time over the course 105h. 22m. 40s.

The yawl Lila, which started in the Bermuda Lipton cup race, finished first, but the Mopsa was allowed four hours twenty-six minutes forty seconds by the yawl.

The Lila is the largest of the five yachts that started, so her elapsed and corrected times are the same, 104h. 10m. 20s.

The sloops Cygnet and Guide arrived earlier in the day, but neither of them was able to complete the course on account of having sick men on board.

The yawl Tamerlane, owned by Fank Maier and winner of the Bermuda race, had not been heard from at a late hour to-night. The Mopsa and Lila encountered head winds and calms and some bad weather. They sailed 450 miles in all, making their speed between four and five knots an hour.

HARRY LEWIS FAVORITE OVER JIMMY BRIGGS

GRAND RAPIDS, July 12.—Harry Lewis of Philadelphia and Jimmy Briggs of Boston, ten rounds at 136 pounds, is the fight card here for to-night. Interest in this fight is even greater than in the Lewis-Prendergast bout, and to-day the management announced that the entire house had been sold, and that only standing room was available at present.

Lewis has been training in Grand Rapids for the bout ever since he defeated Prendergast, and has made a host of friends here by his quiet, gentlemanly ways. He tipped the beam at 133 pounds yesterday after his work in the gymnasium, which was the last of his training. He will rest to-day and expects to get on the scales at about 135 pounds. This is five pounds heavier than he scaled when he met Prendergast, so he is expected to be much stronger against Briggs.

Briggs arrived here from Boston Tuesday night, accompanied by his manager and trainer, Steve Mahoney. He is just at weight, but had to work all day yesterday to hold himself down. He expects to be close to 136 pounds when he weighs.

Lewis reigns a strong favorite in the betting, the prices in the local sporting resorts being 10 to 7 on the Philadelphian.

"HIGH SOCIETY," NOWADAYS, BARS THE AMERICAN GIRL FROM TRUE LOVE.

Girls, Don't Look For English Husbands

By Beatrice Fairfax

Of course the Englishman makes a good husband to the American girl who marries him.

He would be most ungrateful if he did not, seeing that her well-filled coffers go to enrich his impoverished estate.

And, anyway, it is no great task to be devoted to a wife who has beauty, charm and wealth.

The young American husband stands on his own merits.

He has no grand estate to offer, no coronet, and very often has but little money.

But he has a strong right arm, a true, manly heart and unbounded grit and determination.

The girl who marries him knows that he would stand between her and adversity until the last gun was fired.

The Englishman is kind to his wife, but it is always in a condescending way.

He never lets her forget that he is lord of the manor.

Her opinions must always be colored by his.

He treats her as a creature of inferior intelligence, a child who may be petted and made much of, but whose opinions are of no value.

The American looks on his wife as an equal, a friend as well as wife.

He consults her on all matters, realising that sometimes a woman's intuition will bridge a chasm that experience might fall foul of.

He enjoys his pleasures far more if she is by his side to share them.

Some of the American girls who marry titled foreigners might not do so if they had opportunity of meeting the best type of American man.

But unfortunately there is a class of young Americans who spend their time aping the customs and manners of the English.

Naturally the girls prefer the real thing to the imitation and so instead of marrying an anglomaniac without a title they marry an Englishman with one.

If these girls could know the best type of American, the energetic, ambitious young business or professional man, they would not look at a title twice.

The girls' mothers are somewhat to blame also.

The girls are educated abroad, spend most of their time afterward in England or on the continent, and the only men they know are foreigners and self-expatriated Americans.

The Englishman is charmed by the American girl's vivacity and good looks.

He goes about his wooing deliberately, taking all the time he wants to, for the reason that he is fairly sure of his quarry.

He cannot imagine an unpedigreed American girl refusing the offer of a coronet and landed estate, no matter how highly mortgaged the latter may be.

The American is not at all sure of the success of his wooing and so flings himself into it heart and soul.

He woos eagerly, impetuously and with a fervor that carries Miss America off her pretty feet before she realizes whither she is going.

It is quite natural that Lord Northcliffe should be proud of his countrymen's success in winning beautiful American girls for wives. The American girl's money and the American girl's wit are doing much to leaven English society.

But the girl who marries a commoner here in America stands greater chances of perfect happiness than the girl who marries an English duke.

American wooing for American girls is best.

Be satisfied with your American sweethearts. They are the finest in the world and will make the best husbands.

They have all the qualities that women love best in men, gentleness, strength, manliness, honesty and ambition.

With all those attractions in his favor who dare say that the American man is not the most irresistible wooer on earth?

Why Are Women Always Suspicious of Other Women?

BY DOROTHY DIX

ARE women afraid of each other?

And if they are not, from whence springs the deep, dark, deadly distrust with which the general woman seems to regard her sister woman?

Professionally, so to speak, women love each other. They are banded together into all sorts of mutual benefit societies, and nothing makes a woman flare up so quickly and fiercely as any attack upon her sex.

Also a man is capable of a strong, loyal and enduring friendship for some particular woman.

Toward women en masse, however, every woman's attitude is one of rankling suspicion. She bristles with doubt of the other woman's past and present, and future life and intentions as a porcupine does with quills. There is no comradeship of sex between women as there is between men.

On the contrary, there is an instinctive antagonism that makes the glances that pass between strange women clash as cold and hard as steel on steel.

You see this illustrated in a thousand ways every day. Take, for instance, the lack of graciousness with which a woman receives an apology from another woman for an unintentional rudeness.

If in a crowd a man accidentally dances the can-can on another man's toes, or digs his umbrella into a brother's ribs, all that he needs do is to offer a courteous "Pardon me." The aggrieved party receives the excuse with genial grip and a cheery word of acceptance, and all is well.

Women Uncivil

Not so under similar circumstances with women. Let a woman tread on a sister's skirt or jostle her picture hat in a crowd. In vain does she seek to set herself right by apologizing. The woman who has been jostled turns upon the offender a stony stare that says as plainly as if she had shouted it from the housetops:

"I know you did it on purpose, and with malice aforethought, and you are adding insult to injury by daring to address me, when you know perfectly well that I don't know who you are."

No woman who has ever attempted to apologize to another woman but has thanked God that glances didn't kill. If they could, the lobby of every theatre after a matinee would look like a battle field.

Consider, likewise, the insulting reception that every woman who enters a street car gets from every other woman in it. Their eyes, unsympathetic, mercilessly critical, and candidly accusing, begin at the top of the newcomer's hat, and slowly, slowly travel all the way down to the tip of her shoes, appraising every article she has on, the time it was bought, the amount it cost, and wind up in a general summary that she can't afford 'em, no matter what they are.

This habit of women of suspicioning their sister women in a street car may explain why the angelic sex, so famed for its sympathy and compassion, will so seldom move up a place and give a poor, weary shopper a seat. They don't want to sit by a Pariah.

On Their Travels

Precisely the same distrust of each other is to be noticed among women travelers. With men a railroad ticket is a passport to whatever society the train may afford. If a man has to go fifty miles he picks up the acquaintance of some fellow passenger.

If he has to go several days' journey by the time he arrives at his destination he has made friends for life, and heard the family history of half the men on the train.

A woman can go from New York to San Francisco without speaking to a soul except the porter, and woe be to the adventurous sister who essays to make her acquaintance. She gets the frozen heart, the frappeed hand, the ice pitcher, with all the other north pole accessories and trimmings.

"I don't know who you are, but I am sure you are no better than you ought to be, and you are a bold, forward thing to speak to me" is what the discomfited interloper is made to feel.

Never, never shall I forget a little experience of this kind that I once had. I travelled two days and nights on a sleeper on which there was only one woman besides myself. She was such a nice looking woman. So well gowned, so well bred looking, and she was reading Omar, wherefore I greatly desired her acquaintance.

Besides, I am one of the sociable souls that dearly love the sound of their own voices. Finally my opportunity came. The woman met with an accident, and I supplied to her safety pins at a time when safety pins were worth their weight in gold to her. She thanked me—in a tone of voice that indicated that I was responsible for the accident. Only that, and nothing more.

And every now and then I still run across her on the street, and she gazes over me and through me, and under me, with an eye that is as devoid of recognition as if I was a lamp post.

Men an Example

Now, if a man had performed the same service for another man, how chummy they would be. They would never meet but what the party of the first part would say:

"Why, hello, Bill, 'member that time you pinned me up in the back with your safety pins? Say, I'd a had to have gone to bed if it hadn't a been for you. Have a cigar."

And I do protest that my intention in supplying those pins was just as honorable and just as philanthropic, and humane as any man's could have been.

And did you, oh, heroic and courageous sister, ever tell a woman who was a perfect stranger to you that her shirt waist was unbuttoned in the back, or her placket gaping or her belt and skirt had failed to make connections?

What did you get for your trouble? A glare that makes you tremble yet to recall. A look that conveyed to you firmly and completely the lady's undying suspicion that she knew you had some sinister motive and that you didn't fool her.

Why women take this tone of voice with each other nobody knows. They merely do it. That's all.

THE original of this snapshot will receive a crisp, new $2 bill, upon identifying the photograph at the BOSTON AMERICAN office.

The picture was taken yesterday morning about 11 o'clock in the heart of Boston's busy shopping district. Is this YOUR photograph. Is it one of your friends?

One of these snapshots will be taken every morning in front of some store that is patronized by readers of this newspaper. All you have to do to win the award is to call at the BOSTON AMERICAN office or send a photo of yourself and identify the picture.

Watch out for the AMERICAN'S camera man, when you go shopping. Hundreds of women have their eyes on him. He's apt to snap YOU any day.

If he does, you're in luck. You win. The photograph of the woman shopper printed Tuesday has been identified. Miss Helena Moynihan of Quincy called at the BOSTON AMERICAN office yesterday afternoon, identified her photo and carried off the $2 reward together with the original snapshot which she wanted as a souvenir.

How to Save Your Eyesight While Train Reading

IF you travel back and forth into town every day you no doubt read your morning and evening paper, or a magazine, on the train. While this is not, indeed, the best practice for the eyes, it seems a pity to waste so much time which might be turned to good account.

Much of the annoyance which comes from the jolting of the cars can be in some degree obviated by laying a card or some other object below the line to be read, and moving it steadily downward while reading.

Helpful Hints for Busy Housewives

FULLY half the drudgery of planning "twenty-one meals a week" may be saved by planning all of them at once at the beginning of the week. Take advantage of a leisure hour and write down little menus for each one of the seven days. You will find yourself getting more variety into the meals and unconsciously thinking up new combinations.

* * *

When furnishing don't get anything except what there is a positive need for, and test everything you get to see if it fulfills that purpose perfectly. Make a point of having every chair comfortable. There's nothing more astonishing than the number of uncomfortable chairs which are made every year, so that ordering chairs at random is a mistake. Watch the grouping of furniture as carefully as you watch the choice of it. Let your ornaments be as simple as possible and don't crowd them.

* * *

Added to an equal quantity of salad oil, paraffin makes the best machine oil, and, used perfectly pure, will clean the most neglected and dirty sewing machine. Mixed into a stiff paste with silver sand and applied with a course flannel, it will remove all discolored spots from tiled passages, etc. Rags dipped into paraffin and laid between thick papers are invaluable when putting away furs; arrange the furs in layers in a drawer or box, with these papers between. This will prevent moths attacking the furs.

* * *

When you get out Summer clothes and pack away Winter ones, or vice versa, in their places, the most comfortable plan is to have every packet marked with its contents in good clear letters on the outside. Every housekeeper knows the worry and trouble of trying to locate some particular piece of clothing which has been put away for a month or two, and its exact whereabouts completely forgotten until package after package is opened and its contents badly rumpled.

* * *

In decorating the walls of a room the first point to be considered is whether they are to form a background for its contents, or to be in themselves its chief decoration. In rooms that are to be hung with prints or pictures, the paneling or other treatment of the walls should be carefully designed with a view to the size and number of the pictures. Pictures should never be hung against a background of pattern. Nothing is more distressing than the sight of a large oil painting in a ponderous frame seemingly suspended from a spray of wild roses or any of the other naturalistic vegetation of the modern wall paper.

HAS HABIT MASTERED YOU?

FEW people appreciate the immense effect of repetition in conduct—how having done a thing once it is easier to do it again, and at last the act or state becomes almost or wholly automatic. If one is awakened for three or four mornings at a particular time one gets to wake at it of one's own accord.

There is no one who has not had experience of this, yet few people have reflected how much it means as regards the power of custom.

A German scientist who has been writing on the subject and conducting experiments in the matter does not hesitate to say that over half of our daily life is a pure matter of automatic performance—we go on doing things because we did them so yesterday and the day before, and giving no reflection to them. As he expresses it:

"Humanity is led by the nose of habit. It makes us do things without thinking of them, and it makes one perform them almost unconsciously and with little effect.

"Half of one's life is a serious slice out of it, and it is just as well to be anxious as to the direction in which that guidance is leading one."

TO KILL DANDELIONS

THE best means, and surest, is to dig them up, root and all. This is tedious, however, and expensive. Try, in case the digging process is not employed, the sulphate of iron solution. Use a good-sized handful to three gallons of water and sprinkle this over an area twenty feet square. It will not injure the grass and will kill the dandelions: at least some of them.

LOOK AFTER THE NAILS.

THE ugliest finger nails can be improved by taking the trouble to push back the hard skin that grows at the base.

This should be done after the hands have been washed in warm soap and water, and are still moist. A soft towel is the best thing to use for the purpose, or an ivory or bone implement, such as is sold in manicure sets.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

RETURN IT AT ONCE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady, and have been engaged to a young man for over six months. We parted recently and now he writes to me and wants me to return to him an engagement ring which he gave me. He says I may keep the numerous other presents which I received from him, but insists on the return of the diamond ring. As it is a very pretty one I would like to keep it if possible. A. R.

MOST certainly return it and the other gifts as well. Surely you would not wish to keep the ring after the engagement is broken. That would be a very strange thing to do, and if it were known, people would say very disagreeable things about you. If you take my advice you will return it at once.

PERFECTLY PROPER

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man and have been going with a young lady for the past four years. I love her very much and have often told her. She has also told me that she loves me.

I know nearly all of her family and call and see her nearly every night. Now, Miss Fairfax, what I want to know is do you think it would be proper for me to go to her Summer home and stay there over Sunday during the Summer months, as her mother has invited me. E. J. C. D.

YES, perfectly proper, if you have been invited by the girl's mother.

SPEAK TO HIM ABOUT IT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl and am interested in a young man. One of my lady friends sometimes teases me because he fails to tip his hat when he passes by. And this is the only fault she finds in him. Now, dear Miss Fairfax, do you think it would be proper for me to tell him to tip his hat when he sees me hereafter? READER.

YES, I think you might tell him that people notice that he does not lift his hat when he bows. If he is a sensible young man he will not take offence at the telling. Do not pay attention to what your girl friend says about your friends. Girls are always ready to criticise other girls' men friends.

CHAPTER LXVIII

The Shadow on the Stairs

"I KNOW that it was a woman's hand that struck the blow which killed your wife," Armadale said.

"You know that it was a woman?" cried Herries in startled eagerness. "But what grounds have you for thinking so."

"Well, no actual proof, perhaps," Armadale said, "though it's conclusive enough to my mind. On that night several of us were going to poor Zingara's to supper. I turned up before the others, and walked up the stairs to the flat. There was no light on the staircase—you remember how dark it was, as a rule, and how oftener than not the gas was left unlighted?"

Herries nodded. He was not likely to forget any detail, however trivial, connected with that tragic night.

"The only light was the reflection from a street lamp outside, that came through the window half-way up the staircase. I made my way up to your flat. Just as I reached the bend at the foot of the flight leading to your door I heard the big clock of a nearby church chime. I stopped to count the strokes, for it had suddenly occurred to me—I'd been drinking pretty steadily, and my brain wasn't over-clear—that I'd turned up an hour earlier than I was invited for.

"As I stood counting the strokes I heard the door of your flat open. It was as dark inside as on the stairs; but I could just make out what I thought was a woman's figure coming furtively out, and I heard the rustle of skirts. She shut the door quietly after her, then stood quite still for a second, as if listening——"

"And you couldn't see who it was? Or what the woman was like, whether tall or short?" interrupted Herries, in impatient eagerness.

"No there was no light inside the flat as the woman opened the door; and, knowing nothing, of course, of the tragedy, I wasn't particularly interested," said the other. "Whoever the woman was, she hadn't heard me, I think. I stopped to listen just before she opened the door. The thought struck me that it might be Zingara, so as the figure came to the head of the flight of stairs just above me—so softly I could hardly hear more than the whisper of her dress—I sang out:

"'Is that you, Zingara?'

"I knew then for certain that this woman hadn't the ghost of an idea that I was standing there, for she gave a little cry of terror, as if my voice had scared her pretty badly, and she slipped down the stairs past me like the wind.

"I thought nothing of it, even then, except that, not knowing any one was on the staircase, my voice, coming suddenly out of the shadow had startled her. I looked down over the banisters, rather curious as to whom it could be—it couldn't have been Zingara, I knew.

"The staircase window was on the landing below, but the light from the street lamp was so dim that, as for a moment I caught a glimpse of the flying figure—she flashed past the window and was gone in an instant—I still could not say what she was like. Only I did notice one thing, and it struck me at the time; she had something bright clutched in her hands that glittered for a moment as it caught the reflection from the lamp outside."

"The trinkets stolen from my wife's room!" exclaimed Herries, "that were subsequently found in Miss Vail's flat."

"Possibly. But the woman, whoever she was, did not go to Miss Vail's flat. Half-way down the stairs the flying figure stopped as if to take breath—then I heard her descend the creaking stairs quickly to the ground floor and pass out into the street."

"You say she paused halfway down the staircase. Near Miss Vail's room?"

The Mysterious Woman

"Yes, perhaps to listen if I were following," said the artist. "Why do you ask?" Then as a thought suddenly struck him: "I see what you are thinking—that perhaps this woman in a panic slipped for a moment into the flat and hid the jewels where they were afterwards found."

"That thought did occur to me," Herries admitted, "only, of course, the woman could not have entered, unless she had been Miss Vail or her sister. The door would be latched."

"No," cried Armadale, in sudden excitement, "for when, after knocking at the door of your flat and getting no answer, I went down stairs again, I noticed that the door of Miss Vail's room was ajar. As I was turning into the street Miss Vail herself came into the building. I remember she had a parcel under her arm, as though she had just run out to make some purchase at hand, and had left the door unfastened. It may seem a wild theory, but people in panic do wild and unaccountable things."

Was the theory feasible? Herries was wondering, that this unknown woman whom Armadale believed to have been the murderer, her guilty terrors quickened by finding this man outside the door of the flat she was leaving so stealthily, had paused in her mad flight down the stairs, seeing the door of Olga's flat ajar, to dart inside and, finding the room empty, had, in the desperate eagerness of panic to dispose of the proof of her guilt, slipped the jewelry into the first drawer—the work of a moment—and rushed out again and down into the street.

He knew from the records of criminal cases how frequently criminals, after a crime, are impelled by their overwrought nerves to act in a most inexplicable way.

"You didn't mention anything of this to the police?" asked Herries. "But why not?"

"For a very good reason," said Armadale grimly. "The first shock of finding poor Zingara drove all thought of the woman I had seen clean out of my head; you see, the woman appearing like that hadn't struck me as suspicious at the time.

"The shock upset me, and I drank pretty heavily that night—I may as well confess it, I had a touch of D. T.—and by the time I had pulled myself around Olga Vail had been arrested. Then I saw it would be fatal to speak, for I couldn't identify the woman who had passed me like a shadow on the stairs, couldn't describe her, couldn't say it was not Olga Vail.

"As likely as not, my evidence would have convicted her, and I felt sure she was innocent. I would sooner have suspected that queer, half-witted, impish creature, her sister Freda. Not, of course," he added, "that Freda Vail could have done it. I believe, though, the police cross-examined her pretty stiffly."

"I'd give a good deal to find out who that woman was who passed you on the staircase," said John Herries, thoughtfully.

CHAPTER LXIX.

Enter Mr. Delamere

"NOW about this 'interview' and the sketches you want to make," said Herries presently. "I have one or two photographs of the Court you can have, either to publish or make drawings from. Not that they'll be half as interesting as the snapshots published this morning of the man who stole the diamond."

"I haven't seen them, though a man was telling me about 'em in the train," said Armadale. "Smart paper to have got hold of them.

"The hurdy-gurdy man was disguised, of course; still, the snapshots may help the police. You are very kind about the photographs of your house, Mr. Herries, and I know the editor will be tickled to death. There's only one thing he'll regret——"

"What's that?" asked Herries. "I brought that paper home, by the way, with the photographs of the supposed Italian, if you care to see it. But what is it the editor will regret?"

"Why, that he can't publish your photograph—the portrait of the owner of the Mirror of the Moon would have made the article so much more effective. I regret it, too—it's the newspaper man speaking now—but I suppose that's out of the question?"

Herries laughed.

"Since its publication would probably mean that some one or other who knew me as John March would be sure to see it, I prefer to leave my portrait unpublished—at any rate, until you have discovered who that woman was who passed you on the staircase," he said.

ALL FACTIONS WANT MORAN IN CAMBRIDGE

LEADERS SAY RANK AND FILE ARE WITH HIM FOR GOVERNOR TO A MAN.

CAMBRIDGE, July 12.—In response to a demand from many members of the Democratic city committee for the official indorsement of the candidacy of John B. Moran of Boston for the Democratic nomination for Governor, Chairman Edward Quinn will call a special meeting of the organization in a few days.

The meeting will probably be held some night the latter part of this week or the first part of next. There are several members of the city committee out of the city at the present time and the chairman is only waiting to hear from them in order to fix the most convenient date for the meeting.

"After the meeting of the city committee I will announce where I stand on the Governorship question," Chairman Quinn said to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN. "It would look too much as if I were trying to influence the action of the committee if I should formally state my attitude at this time. It is true that I called on Mr. Moran with a friend a few days ago and we talked over the Governorship matter, but only in a friendly way. I will say that I hear a great deal of talk favorable to Mr. Moran among the people of Cambridge. It is a little early to get excited about politics, but I must admit there is more talk about the candidacy of Mr. Moran than that of any other Democrat."

"I have been told, Mr. Quinn, that a meeting of the Cambridge city committee is soon to be called to consider the candidacy of Mr. Moran," said the reporter.

"With Moran to a Man."

"Yes, that is true. Several members have suggested that the committee should meet and consider his candidacy. I shall call the meeting for the last of this week or the early part of next, whenever it will be possible for the largest number to attend," said Chairman Quinn.

J. Frank Facey, a former chairman of the city committee, and generally credited with being one of the best politicians in the University city, says Moran will carry the Cambridge caucuses for delegates to the State convention.

"You may say that I am for Moran to the finish and I don't see how anyone can beat him in the caucuses. I talk politics a great deal with the rank and file of the party, the men who get out and work for the delegates, and work on election day, too. They are with Moran to a man. Chairman Quinn of the city committee has been asked by members of the Democratic city committee to call a meeting for the official indorsement of Moran. I am still a member of the committee and I know that there is a strong sentiment in favor of Moran among the members."

"But suppose that leaders of the State machine and their friends in Cambridge should go out against Moran—what would you do in that case?"

"They would not cut much of a figure, in my opinion," said Mr. Facey. "I really mean it when I tell you that Moran will get the Cambridge delegates. And he will get a lot of the independent voters, which means a good deal here, as Cambridge is the home of independents."

"Don't Know Who Could Beat Him."

"Then, as I understand you, you would be for Moran and many of your political friends would be with him and you think he could win in the caucuses?" Mr. Facey was asked.

"Yes, I mean all that," was the reply, "and I think he would come pretty near carrying the city at the election. I can name to you now, right off the reel, the names of a dozen men whose influence count, who believe as I do. But I will let you dig them out yourself."

Edward J. Flynn, who was one of the hardest workers for Mayor Thurston, and is one of the leading lawyers in the city, says Moran is the very best candidate the Democrats could nominate for Governor.

"He's refreshing," says Mr. Flynn. "In his methods he is original, and I believe his critics will find he is thorough before he gets through. He is certainly one of the greatest trial lawyers in the State, and that much is conceded by the best of them. He would make a great campaign. Do I think he could carry the Cambridge caucuses? Why, certainly, I think he could. I don't know who could beat him. I think he is all right and I find others every day who think the same way."

Mr. Flynn named a number of men who take an interest in politics as some of those who have told him they were going to be for Moran after he has formally announced that he is a candidate for the Democratic nomination.

One of the best informed of the men who have figured largely in the public eye of Cambridge is ex-Representative Frederick S. Deitrick. His record in the Legislature proved him to be a man who thinks and acts for himself.

"Mr. Moran would make a strong candidate for Governor," said Mr. Deitrick, "and right along I hear a lot of talk favorable to him, not only among the leaders, but also among the rank and file."

John W. Coveney of East Cambridge, an ex-alderman, ex-representative and ex-Democratic senator, says there is no question about Moran's popularity in this city. "In this section we will all be with Moran," he says. "We will be with him to a man. Will he carry the caucuses? There is no question about it. Of course he will."

John H. H. McNamee, former Mayor, who was a candidate for Governor last year until the very day of the convention, and then withdrew in favor of General Charles W. Bartlett, is expected to make an announcement of his position in a few days. His intimate friends profess to believe that he will not be a candidate this year but will be inclined to favor the candidacy of Moran.

$5 DOWN, $1 PER WEEK.

The lot of pianos must and will be sold at the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms to settle up unpaid accounts, nearly every standard make on hand, Ivers & Pond, Hallet & Davis, Chickering and Merrill, are in mahogany and walnut cases, 3 pedals and in first-class condition, two pianos for one, reason why, expenses in Roxbury hardly noticed; expenses in Boston, $200 to $500 daily; nearly every make to select from; good uprights $40, $50, $60, $65 and $75; squares $10, $15 and $20; why pay more? Several new pianos, the stock of a first-class piano maker gone out of business, which will be sold at a sacrifice; don't fail to call and secure the greatest chance ever offered; the canvasser, agent and music teacher will tell you to keep away from us, reason why, we don't pay commissions; you get the benefit by our low prices; see for yourself; examine our nice stock.

The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high-salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little; go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

Why pay $200 more for a piano because it is on a polished floor? See us, nearly every make in stock, at the lowest possible prices and on very easy terms, 10 years' guarantee, stool and scarf with every piano, free delivery everywhere in unmarked wagons, goods guaranteed as represented or money refunded; entrance will be where you see the red flag; sale positive all this week; open Sat. eve, till 9 P. Another Revolt Against Politics for Corporations Only

New Hampshire Boasts Another of the Type of Public Men That Put Principle Before Party

Winston Churchill, who has accepted the invitation of the Lincoln Republican party of New Hampshire to be its candidate for Governor, is perhaps better known as a novelist than as a statesman, or even as a politician.

And yet we think that one thing which he has said in his letter of acceptance of this nomination may be worth all the novels he has written, good as they are.

"I have at heart with you," he said, "the perpetuation of the principles of American government, and I take the liberty of suggesting that the broad issue and general platform should be the non-interference of the Boston & Maine Railroad, or of any other corporation, in the politics and government of the State."

Mr. Churchill may have given more attention to literature and the arts than he has to politics. No doubt the professional politicians of his State, which is easily controlled by the professionals, will jeer alike at his candidacy and his utterance. BUT HE HAS, WITH THE UNFAILING INSTINCT OF A MAN WHO CARES MORE FOR THE RIGHT THAN FOR ANY POLITICAL ORGANIZATION, PUT HIS FINGER ON THE CRYING EVIL IN AMERICAN GOVERNMENT TO-DAY.

What he complains of in New Hampshire is equally true in Vermont. In other States of New England, the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad is dominant not only in transportation, but in political power.

In Pennsylvania the battle for the right centres on the power of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and its allied corporations.

In Kentucky and Tennessee Belmont's Louisville & Nashville Railroad is the political factor.

In Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi the Southern Railroad, controlled by Pierpont Morgan, is the force to which machine politicians defer.

Florida is divided between the Plant System and the East Coast Railway, owned by Flagler, of the Standard Oil Company. As for the unhappy condition of California, under the hard hand of the Southern Pacific, that is a matter of common notoriety.

To go into detail concerning these railroads would mean a series of chapters. It is enough now to say that any wise observer of political affairs in the United States who has sources of even ordinary knowledge must see that the railroad corporations are rapidly proceeding to the point of owning the government.

This being the case, does it seem an extreme proposition to say that to avert such a danger it would even be better that the government should own the railroads?

Mr. Churchill steps into the political arena as one of the new type of public men not so closely wedded to a party name but that they can put an issue far above the party which might antagonize it. If he will stand by his guns he may go far.

The Man Who Has Never Kissed a Girl

By Winifred Black

THE dispatches tell us that Pennsylvania women are taking deep interest in the candidacy of Mr. Stewart, the Republican nominee for Governor of that State, the particular occasion for said interest being that Mr. Stewart says he has never kissed any woman but his mother.

They may like that kind of a man in Pennsylvania, but I doubt if there is another State in the Union where women would turn their heads to look at a man who had grown old enough to run for Governor without paying their sex the tribute of even one tiny little half-forgotten kiss.

I knew a young man once whose mother was always boasting that her son had never kissed a girl.

We, the girls, who knew him, knew why.

A man who can get through the years from sixteen to forty without kissing a pretty girl, or an attractive woman or so once in a while, doesn't belong in real life at all; he belongs to a monastery somewhere up in the Alps where he can have lots of fun freezing to death.

I saw a man sit in the office of a country hotel not long ago, and tell the assembled listeners that he had never seen what he called a "hoss" race, had never been to a dance, had never touched a card and had never taken a drink at the bar in his life. Two voices broke the hushed silence which greeted this statement.

"How about that jug hid out in the haymow?" said one voice.

"Lands alive!" said the other, "couldn't you never raise the price?"

I wonder which of these voices hit upon the truth in this particular case?

Ever since Gladstone Dowie shone effulgent in the West, men have been rising in the four quarters of the globe claiming their share of his halo by announcing that they have never been kissed.

Poor loons! as our Scotch cousins have the habit of saying. Whom do they think to charm by this publishing of their follies.

I wouldn't kiss a man forty years old who had never kissed a woman before if I had to go unkissed to my grave.

Neither would any other woman in her senses.

It isn't always a sign that the apple hangs too high upon the tree just because it is never picked.

Some apples show the most unobservant that they are not worth the picking, and even the humble cutworm begs leave to pass them by.

What to Do and When

PICK up any papers you see and put any papers or strings you find in the waste-paper cans.

Help your parents cheerfully and be thankful you have parents to help.

Show helpfulness on the cars by giving women and older men seats.

Never push by people going through doors or into cars.

Take off your hats when a women enters a car or elevator.

Do not chew gum in a parlor or church or car. It is bad manners.

Do not cut or clean your nails or pick your teeth before people. Do such things in your own room.

Treat the Animals Kindly

Do not tease dogs or cats or horses. It makes them unhappy and cross. Never speak loud to a horse. He is man's best animal friend, and will do better work if you speak softly and pet him. No horse was ever vicious or ugly unless man had made him so. The same thing is true of dogs and cats. Treat them as you would like to be treated.

Do not hold a pet cat or dog after it struggles to be free. They feel as you would if a big giant crushed you in his arms and would not let you go.

Set a dish of water in the yard for thirsty dogs and cats. Do not yell or scream at tramp animals. Feed and water them when possible.

If you see any animal misused or suffering report to some member of the Woman's Improvement Society.

Do not shoot any song birds, sea gulls or other harmless birds. Shoot nothing that is not dangerous to human life or to domestic animals.

One of the Cruel Sins

Never trap any animal, even a vicious one, save in a trap that instantly ends its life. One of the most cruel sins to-day is the setting of traps which catch wild animals by the feet and legs and leave them to suffer for hours.

Do not say anything behind another's back you would not dare to say to his face. No matter if you hear older people do this, it is wrong. Set them a good example.

If you see a woman or child drop bundles or parcels in the stores or cars offer to assist in picking them up.

Never stare at a deformed person; never laugh or make sport of any one who is old, crippled, poorly dressed or queer. It is sign of bad breeding to do this.

Never tease or annoy a pedler or tramp.

Begin every morning with saying, "Now what can I do to-day to make some one happy?"

Treat every one you meet every day just as you would if you knew you were never to see them again.

Do not say I seen. I saw is the correct expression.

Listen to people who use good language and try to cultivate the right way to express yourself. Do not say I done it. Say I did it.

Do not whisper and laugh behind your hand in the presence of others. It makes them uncomfortable.

Always Be a Helper

Remember always that your parents are older than you are and better able to know what is best for you to do. Remember there is a lot of trouble, care and expense in bringing you up and clothing and schooling you. Try and make your parents glad and proud, instead of miserable.

Never talk of any subject with other children you would not want your mother to hear. Just as soon as you do this you are on the wrong track. Tell her all your thoughts and let her explain life to you.

Read these rules over twice a week and try and live up to all of them.

Unless you do try, you are not a helper.

The greatest thing in the world is to be a helper.
